With regard to No. 1 Western Road, No. 1 Southern Road, and No. 19 Northern Road, it will form a condition of the Contract, that should there at any time during the term of the Contract be communication by Railway established between any of the places, either wholly or in part, the Government may, by giving one calendar month's notice in writing to the Contractor, of their intention so to do, either determine the Contract, or deduct from the Contract price the amount that shall be charged by, and actually paid to, the Railway Commissioners, for the conveyance of the Mails along any portion of the road between any of the places.

It will be optional with the parties tendering to propose the mode of conveyance, and it may be found necessary to adopt horse mails on many lines where wheeled carriages have been or are now used; but on all roads where wheeled vehicles can travel, a preference will be given to carriages licensed for a limited number of passengers.

Mail guards and postal inspectors must be conveyed free, but each tender must state the sum per seat required for every additional passenger who may at any time be sent by order of the Government.

The mails are to be dispatched on the days and hours to be fixed by the Postmaster-General, either according to the present arrangement, or as he may afterwards determine for the public convenience, but no contractor will be bound to travel at a quicker rate than 8 miles an hour, including all stoppages. A fine of 5s. for every five minutes delay after the specified time of starting and a like penalty for every ten minutes delay after the specified time of arrival, except for the first five or ten minutes respectively, will be invariably imposed, unless satisfactory certificates be given that the obstacles were insuperable.

It must be understood that in all instances the usual road between the places mentioned is to be travelled; and where no mail has previously run, the route directed by the Postmaster-General must be pursued, or that specified by the contractor in his tender.

Intending contractors must understand that no excuse for delay will be entertained unless supported by certificates from persons of known respectability, as to the cause of delay, and that it is not attributable to the absence of ample provision, both for ordinary duties, and to overcome difficulties arising from rivers or creeks, floods, heavy roads, or the occurrence of accidents to men, horses, or vehicles employed. And it must be clearly understood, that in every case the passengers must be a secondary consideration to the mails, and that postal inspectors, country postmasters, and mail guards have instructions to see that such is practically the case.

The contractors will carry all bags, letters, packets, and newspapers delivered to them, under the authority of the Postmaster-General, or any of the Postmasters, and shall provide secure lockers for the mails in carriages, waterproof coverings for the mails on horseback, and leather pouches for case letters and newspapers.

Contractors will be required to convey loose letters given to them by any postmaster for delivery on the road, and unless specially exempted, shall, when applied to by any person on the road, receive letters for conveyance to the nearest post office; but in other respects they will be bound to prevent the carriage of any letter or packet, by any of their servants or passengers, or otherwise to the prejudice of the post office revenue, under penalty of £5 for each and every offence.

Contractors will be strictly bound not to assign any portion of their contract without consent of the Postmaster-General.

The drivers and postmen are to be men of certified good conduct.

All fines and penalties incurred under the agreement are to be deducted by the Postmaster-General from the quarterly instalments falling due to the contractor, and to be considered as over and above any penalties provided by any Act of Council.

Each tender must bear the signatures of two respectable and solvent persons, engaging to enter into a bond with the contractor, to double the amount of the contract, for the safety of the mails and the due performance of the contract, and every stipulation therein; and if contractors do not sign their bonds within the space of two calendar months from the date of their tenders being accepted, the Government reserves the power of cancelling their contracts at such period as may be found expedient.

The hours of starting from each Post-office, or stage, and other particulars, may be ascertained at the General Post Office, where parties proposing to tender are invited to seek information.

Printed forms of tender may be had on application at the General and other Post-offices throughout the colony; and persons tendering are requested to fill up such forms with great care.

ARRIVAL OF THE

BENARES

WITH AUGUST MAIL.

[FROM OUR CITY CORRESPONDENT.]

London, Saturday, August 10, 1861.

PARLIAMENT was prorogued on Tuesday. The Queen's speech announces friendly and satisfactory relations with Foreign Powers, and expresses "a hope" that there is no danger of any disturbance to the peace of Europe, and an earnest wish that the affairs of Italy may be settled in a manner best suited to the welfare and happiness of the Italian people. With regard to affairs in the United States it laments the calamitous results of the dissensions in the States, and reiterates the declaration of strict neutrality. The rapid improvement in the internal condition of affairs in India is alluded to, and the material substance of the Queen's speech ends.

The great matter of interest at this moment is the news from America. The first great battle between the North and South was fought, won, and lost on the 21st July (Sunday), at "Bull's Run, about fifteen miles from Manassas Junction — and resulted in a disastrous defeat of the Federal army, which was completely panic-stricken and fled tumultuously towards Washington, with a loss to them of the whole of the artillery of rifled cannon and large quantities of arms. The whole Federal army, under General M'Dowell, advanced on the Confederate's positions, and after nine hours' fighting, succeeded in taking three batteries, and seemed about to gain the day, when, in consequence of a backward movement by a small body of artillery, the teamsters of the waggons took fright, thinking there was a defeat, instantly cut the traces of the horses, jumped on their backs, and bolted. This gave the troops an idea that things were going wrong, and in an instant the whole army took fright and fled in the utmost disorder. At this moment General Beauregard, the commander of the Confederate army, was reinforced by General Johnstone with 25,000 men, who pursued the panic-stricken "grand army" of the north as far as Fairfax. The Federal army "bolted"—nothing could stop them until they reached Washington.

The loss on both sides is estimated at between 2000 and 4000 killed and wounded.

Such a disgraceful flight has aroused everyone, and the feeling in England is one of satisfaction at the result, notwithstanding the general sympathy here with the North, because of the ungrateful, insolent, and offensive conduct of the North towards England of late. They deserve the "tarnation licking" they have received; but it will at once be seen that such a result will prolong the war and exasperate all parties.

Jefferson Davis, the President of the Southern Confederacy, commanded the centre in person.

The Union Defence Committee and the New York Press attribute the disaster to the incapacity of the Cabinet; and General Scott has admitted that they forced him to fight the battle contrary to his judgment, and before he was prepared.

M'Dowell has been superseded by General M'Clellan, of known repute.

An additional army of 80,000 men has been voted, and Congress and the people of the North have declared their readiness to make any sacrifice of men and money, with the view of retrieving the disgrace sustained.

At the latest date an attack by the Confederates was expected on Harpur's Ferry, and probably one on Washington.

Affairs in Hungary are approaching a crisis. The Lower House at Pesth has adopted an address from the Diet, in answer to the rescript of the Emperor, declining to send deputies to the Council of the Empire—declares that the Diet must cease to transact any business, and finally states that further negotiations are broken off. This is throwing down the gage to the Emperor. It is to be seen what will follow—a rupture, of course.

At the same time the Croatian and Sclavonian Diet has also resolved not to send representatives to the Council of the Empire.

The Italian loan of £20,000,000 is a complete success.

At Warsaw (Poland) the people have assembled in great crowds before the residence of the English Consul, and deposited bouquets of flowers with shouts of "Long live Queen Victoria." The bouquets were offered to the British nation in grateful acknowledgment of its sympathy for Poland.

The Sultan is effecting great reforms in Turkey throughout the public offices.

The King of Sweden, and Prince Oscar of Sweden, are on a visit at St. Cloud to his Majesty the Emperor of the French.

Sir George Grey, "Administrator of the Government of New Zealand," has been appointed "Governor and Commander-in-Chief."

The iron-clad frigate Warrior has proceeded down the river. Tenders are invited for three more iron clad frigates twenty feet longer, and 15½ inches broader than the Warrior, the tonnage to be 6620 tons, with 1250 horse-power.

A new bridge is to be built at Blackfriars double the width of the present one.

Saturday, August 17th.

Royal visits are the order of the day just now. The Archduke Maximilian, the Queen-Mother of Spain, Christina, and suite, the King of Sweden, and Prince Oscar, the latter being about to marry one of our Princesses (Alice), the Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia—are all in this country.

The Holstein difficulty is settled, the Danish Government having made concessions satisfactory to Germany. It consents to allow the contribution of Holstein from its special revenue to the common budget of the monarchy, to be provisionally limited for the current year to the quota allotted to Holstein by the normal budget of 1856. The German Diet accepts this, and will take no further measures on the subject.

Baron Ricasoli has sent a circular to the Italian representatives abroad, proclaiming that Italy has constituted herself, although a portion of Italian territory is still in the hands of others, that Europe seeing the strength and fitness of the Italians for Constitutional Government, must be convinced of her right to possess the entire Peninsula.

Italy has constituted herself, notwithstanding that a portion of Italian territory is in the hands of others. Europe, beholding us armed and strong, will become persuaded of our right to the entire possession of our territory, and will find a guarantee of repose and rest by favouring the restoration of the part of which is wanting to us. It will also become persuaded that we, a people essentially Catholic, understand better than any other the true interests of the Church when we ask her to divest herself of the feudal rights which a barbarous age gave her.

The address of the Hungarian Diet to the Emperor of Austria has been adopted by the Upper House without alteration, and presented to his Majesty, who replied in general terms. The Cabinet Council demands that the Hungarian Diet be dissolved, and that an Imperial manifesto be addressed to the different peoples of the Austrian Empire. A crisis is evidently approaching.

There have been further disturbances at Warsaw—a collision between the people and the troops—great agitation. The orders of the Governor set at defiance.

The Sultan of Turkey is steadily prosecuting his reforms in the administration of the Empire. There is to be a sale here of the jewellery of the Sultan.

The Pasha of Egypt is following the example of the Sultan by retrenchments in various branches of the Administration and the civil list, &c. He has reduced the army, the police force, the Royal household, sold his horses, plate, &c.; in fact, is either turning all he can into money or cutting down expenses. His debts are £7,000,000, and he is liable for £3,000,000 on account of the Suez canal.

General M'Clellan, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Federal army of America, has infused new life into the corps. Congress has passed bills to increase the taxes and duties with a view to provide means to carry on the war.

Her Majesty's visit to Ireland next week, is likely to be most enthusiastically accepted by the Emerald Isle. She leaves on the 22nd instant, per Holyhead, by rail, thence by steam to Kingstown and Dublin.

The Queen, accompanied of course by the Prince Consort and others of the Royal family, landed at Kingstown on Thursday morning, and was received by her Irish subjects with the most loyal and considerate sympathy. There was an entire absence of boisterous demonstration—not a cheer as the Queen deserved. Her Majesty still grieves deeply for the loss of her mother. Her visit to Ireland is of the strictest private character. The crowds assembled to do her honour and give her welcome were immense. Her Majesty drove out at Dublin in so unostentatious array that no one knew it.

The Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia, the Prince William and Princess Charlotte have returned to the continent.

The King of Sweden and Prince Oscar have been paying private visits to the public buildings and large private establishments of London and Woolwich, &c.

Queen Christina and her husband have returned to the continent (Boulogne). The Duke and Duchess of Montpensier return to Spain.

The Duke of Oporto has returned to Lisbon, and this, I think, completes the catalogue of the proceedings and movements of royal personages.

The Emperor of Austria has dissolved the Hungarian Diet, and reserves to himself the power of calling another "possibly within six months from this time."

The Diet have with acclamation adopted a resolution or energetic protest against this violation of the Constitution, and against the other arbitrary acts of the Government, declaring that the dissolution of the Diet is an illegal act.

There is a general expectation that this event will be but the precursor of graver events. Military despotism rules in Hungary, the taxes being collected by military force.

Orders are said to have been given for the formation of two more corps d'armee on a war footing, one of which is to occupy Austrian Poland.

The Pope still continues his aid to the efforts of the Bourbon party to effect a reactionary movement in Naples, but as yet without success—the Italian troops under Cialdini dispersing them in all directions. At the same time the snake is only scotched not killed.

The Italian Government has resolved to abandon the passport system throughout the dominion of Victor Emmanuel—namely, the Northern and Central Italy—where for the future travellers will merely be required to give his card, or verbally his name and nationality. In the Neapolitan States in consequence of the Bourbon attempts at revolution, the passport system will remain in force until the country is thoroughly settled.

The Sultan has resolved upon a conciliatory policy towards Servia, and the Herzegovina. Omar Pasha, after defeating the insurgents in three battles, having by orders from the Sultan issued a proclamation declaring that the Sultan accedes to all the demands made by the Montenegrins.

In Circassia, which is always in revolt, the Russians have been repeatedly defeated, and the Circassians have now declared their independence and proclaimed a Republic.

In America the Confederates have, since the battle at "Bull's Run," been repeatedly defeated by the Federalists. General M'Clellan is energetically reorganising the Federal army. What his plans are for the future no one knows, but he has refused to give any information of his movements to the Press—some of the papers having violated the agreement entered into with him.

The Confederates are concentrating their forces on the side of the Potomac, and General Beauregard has announced that he will act only on the defensive. This is the wisest policy, and the best, and the truest for the successful accomplishment of the Independence of the Southern Confederation.

It appears now that the battle at Bull's Run was, as I imagined, actually won by the Federal troops, at half-past three in the afternoon, but that the arrival of General Johnstone with reinforcements, led to some movement by General M'Dowell, which the hangers-on of the army mistook for a retreat, they took fright, and the panic in a moment extended all along the line, and the victory was then converted into a disastrous rout, without an actual defeat. The Federal army in short won the battle, and then fled in a fright.

Prince Napoleon had been presented to President Lincoln on the 3rd August, and in the evening dined at the White House in company with the Cabinet and Generals Scott and M'Clellan, and the British and French ministers.

The Confederate privateers have been swarming in numbers, and captured numerous vessels of the Federal States.

Murders have been of most singular frequency—at the rate of about one a day for weeks past; in some part of the United Kingdom oftener, and executions have been frequent.

The Baron de Vidal has been sentenced to one year's hard labour for the attempt on the life of his son, and the latter to one month's confinement for contempt of court. The verdict of the jury was "Guilty of unlawfully wounding," giving him the benefit of the doubt as to whether it was with an intention to kill. If the latter had been the case, sentence of death would have been recorded against the Baron. The sentence for "unlawfully wounding" would not have been so severe, but for the Baron's using the heavy end of his whip.

With the exception of some reactionary attempts in the Neapolitan States, slight insurrectionary movements in Spain and Portugal—not worth recording, the political agitation in Hungary and Poland, the state of affairs in Europe is satisfactory. The Danish-Holstein question is happily arranged. Italy intends to leave to time and the natural course of events the acquisition of Rome and Venetia. Nevertheless, danger threatens in Hungary and Poland, and what may follow is hard to guess. For the present I do not think that there will be any violent manifestation of opposition to the powers that be. There has been some talk on the subject of the immense naval force of France, and the necessity of England being equally forward, but the feeling of distrust against the Emperor has quite subsided. Matters in America are arriving at that point where the shoe pinches. The Northerns cannot conquer the South, and must in time give in, as the expenses of the war are enormous. Trade is stopped, ruin must follow, and the people become disgusted in time with the heavy drain upon them. A reactionary feeling will then set in, and the question will be settled, not by force of arms, but by the politicians.

Great uneasiness already prevails in the country at the prospect of our supplies of American cotton being cut off. The South won't let the North have the raw material, for the purpose, of course, of starving the Northern manufacturers, while the North won't let the South ship to England; and, finally, the South so positive that the whole state of affairs is one of a question of cotton supply, have resolved to let no one have cotton at all.

The weather for weeks past has been most brilliant for the harvest. The crop will be good, and we shall have much less to import, therefore, less gold to pay.

The money market is very easy. The Banks must reduce the rate next Thursday to four per cent.

Trade is dull, and speculation idle. Consols 92.

Monday, August 26.

The Africa, from New York, has brought advices to the 15th instant, and news of the Federal troops having sustained another defeat at Davis Creek, near Springfield, Missouri. The battle took place on the 10th instant. The Federal troops, 8000 strong, under General Lyon, attacked the Secessionists 23,000 strong, and a severe engagement took place. It resulted in the defeat of Lyon and the retreat of the Federals in good order. The Northerns lost 800 killed and wounded, the Secessionists' loss is returned as heavy, including Generals Prince and M'Culloch.

The London papers do not give more than a brief telegraphic summary of the news, but I forward you full particulars.

Mr. Faulkner, who was, in President Buchanan's time, the American Envoy at Paris, has been arrested at Washington, on a charge of treason.

A terrible railway accident took place yesterday morning; 22 persons killed and 100 wounded, some dangerously. Two excursion trains left Brighton for London, and while in a tunnel some miles long, one train ran into and over the other. CONTINENTAL NEWS.

[FROM OUR PARIS CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, August 3, 1861.

THE approaching visit of the King of Sweden, who is to land at Havre on Monday next, is to serve as a pretext for rendering unusually splendid the celebration of the Imperial fête of the 15th of this month. What will be the exact character of the rejoicings is not yet divulged; but we understand that a programme of astonishing brilliance is prepared, and that the show off, if the weather only prove propitious, is to be absolutely dazzling, especially in the article of fireworks.

The Emperor has left Vichy, having decreed, as a mark of his sense of the enthusiastic demonstrations of the people of that little town, the opening of a vast number of streets and boulevards, the formation of a new park, and the erection of various public buildings, sufficient, one would think, to keep the whole country busy for the next five years. The Emperor contributes a handsome sum towards all this masonry, and the State pays the rest, by remitting, for seven years, the amount paid to it by the municipality of Vichy, in the shape of rent for the mineral waters.

The King of Prussia is expected here about the 17th instant, on a visit to the Emperor at the camp of Chalons. Splendid fetes are, of course, to be got up in his honour.

The French manufacturers of every class are evidently bent on figuring with éclat at the London Exhibition of next year. The Government has undertaken to transport free of cost all the objects accepted for that occasion, to and from London; an arrangement the benefit of which has just been extended to the Algerian colonists.

M. de Persigny's plan of making the prefects meet together to discuss, from their various points of view, the measures most likely to promote the improvement of their respective departments, is already being put into execution. Several groups of prefects are now in conclave, and others will shortly meet for the same purpose. The sphere of prefectorial action being purely administrative, the dread of increased centralisation of political action, feared by some as a possible result of this measure, scarcely appear to be founded.

The brilliant success of the Trentenary Bonds is still affording the French Press a theme for gratulation. The Constitutionnel, much given to crowing, sets forth with great exultation the curious fact that the 132 millions demanded by the Government, at three per cent., has been covered 15½ times by small subscribers belonging to the mass of the public, and 5½ by capitalists, properly so called, while the 100 millions (francs) just demanded by the English Government at a rate about equivalent to that of the French Threeper Cents. has only been covered 5½ times, and solely by the great capitalists. The Constitutionnel omits to contrast the terms on which the two loans have been effected,—the French one having been raised at a sacrifice, on the part of the Government, of 33½ per cent.; but even with this drawback to the brilliance of the affair, it must be admitted that the success of this new loan indicates both increase of wealth and increased confidence in its present Government, on the part of the French public.

Not one of the European Sovereigns, except Francis Joseph, is just now in his capital. The King of Denmark has had an interview in the Cattegat with his brother of Sweden, and is cruising about in the enjoyment of sea-breezes; while the Swedish King is en route for Paris, where he will make acquaintance with his wife's godson and third or fourth cousin, the Prince Imperial. The King of Prussia and the minor German Princes are all taking baths at Baden or elsewhere; the King of Portugal is bathing on the shores of his little kingdom; the Queen of Spain is doing the same at Santander, to which place she travelled with a great bag of gold and silver money upon her lap, from which she scattered innumerable alms at every place through which she passed. The Emperor and Empress of Russia are leaving Moscow for Sebastopol, in whose neighbourhood is a charming palace that belonged to the late Empress-Dowager, and where they are to spend a few weeks. They take their two youngest children only, and a retinue of merely eleven servants; economy being practised in earnest, just now, by the Russian Court. The King of Belgium is at Ostend; and Victor Emmanuel is hunting chamois about the base of Monte Rosa. The latter, in habits of deportment, is certainly the most simple of European sovereigns. On quitting Turin, he got into a compartment of an ordinary railway train; two of his generals, and three of his gamekeepers, occupying the same carriage with the King, who was as plainly attired as either of them.

The disturbed state of Syria seems to have acted as a damper to the zeal of the French pilgrims who usually sail from Marseilles, at this season, to make a visit to Jerusalem; and accordingly the priests of St. Sulpice, of this city, have exposed in the sacristy of their magnificent church, a model of Jerusalem, which has been blessed by the Pope, and a visit to which is declared to confer the same spiritual benefits as those attached to the actual pilgrimage.

The Count de Chambord, it seems, wrote a letter to M. Charette, just after Castelfidardo, which letter has now fallen into hands that have allowed it to be made public. The Count appears to have anticipated a speedy triumph for the French Legion, and states that "the day will soon arrive when I shall have the opportunity of devoting myself to interests so sacred (referring to the support of the temporal power of the Pope), happy to purchase with my blood, the triumph of a cause which is that of France, of the Church, and of God himself;" upon which the Siècle very pertinently enquires, "What is there to prevent the Count from devoting himself, at this present time, to interests so sacred?"

The curious scene, so circumstantially narrated by the "soi-disant," semi-official journals, in which the Count de Goyon and Monsignor de Merode, the Papal Pro-Minister of War, are shown as so nearly coming to fisticuffs regarding the giving up of the Papal Zouave who killed the French soldier who was walking in one of the public gardens with a certain woman, is being busily discussed by the entire French Press, and has strengthened the conviction, so general here, that the French Government considers that its rôle at Rome is shortly to come to an end. The puzzling policy of the Emperor baffles alike the previsions of friend and foe, but the inconsistency of the continued occupation of Rome with the programme of the Italian campaign, the recognition of the Italian kingdom, and the emperor's professions of affection for Italy, is becoming so unpopular in France, that it seems impossible that it can be persisted in much longer. A new protest, addressed to France, to England, and to Italy, is being signed all over Italy, despite the apparent opposition of the Government to the measure, setting forth the duty of endeavouring, if possible, to obtain from France by peaceful means, what, from any other power, Italy would demand by arms; setting forth the necessity of Rome to Italy, the evils of the present complication, the anarchy thus bred in Italy itself, the ill-will begotten thereby against France, and the total absence of any plausible pretext for the French occupation of Rome, "seeing that no one attacks religion, and that all Italy is ready to protect the person of the Holy Father." The protest declares the French occupation maintained for twelve years, to be "equivalent to a conquest," and to be "a violation of the principle of non-intervention proclaimed by France." It asserts that "Italy belongs to the Italians only," and addresses itself "to France, which helped us to fight for our deliverance and unity; to England, which was the first to proclaim the principle of non-intervention; and to Europe, which has hailed with affectionate congratulations the uprising of the national life of collective Italy, and whose tranquillity is dangerously threatened by the arbitrary, indefinite occupation of Rome."

The evil caused by this occupation is undoubtedly becoming very serious. The bands of brigands, of which the greater number must certainly be considered as acting under the orders of the ex-king and his abettors, are no sooner dispersed upon one point, by the energetic action of Cialdini, than they form upon another. The mass of the people have no sympathy with them, but, on the contrary, are filled with terror by their brutalities; yet, such is the demoralisation of the population so long subjected to Bourbon rule, that, so far from making any resistance to their tormentors, they will even join with them in their nefarious attempts, partly in the hope of escaping their attacks, partly in the hope of sharing the plunder which these wretches amass, wherever they show themselves, among the villages and little towns of the rural districts. Cialdini's task is a hard one in every respect. The bands of brigands, if dispersed, form again, and renew their atrocities; the people are indignant against the Government for not protecting them, yet not only render the General no help in his arduous task, but too often allow their sectional jealousies to break forth at any act of wholesale severity performed by him, and begin to clamour against the "Northerners," whom they accuse of hating the Southern people, and tyrannising over them! The day that Francis II. quits Italy, as he would have done, after the fall of Gaeta, but for the inexplicable policy of the Emperor Napoleon, in allowing him to make of Rome the head-quarters of absolutist reaction. The ex-King has just sold the Farnese Gardens, on the Palatine Mount, the site of the old palace of the Cæsars, to the French Government, for 90,000 crowns. What this move may betoken it would be premature to prophecy. The French are going to make excavations in these lovely gardens, in the hopes of finding Roman remains to transport to Paris. "Under every deep" says Emerson, in one of his oracular utterances, "another deep opens." Who would have supposed that there existed, upon our planet, anything in the shape of a human head so deeply "rooted and grounded" in political nonsense, as to be capable of regarding Francis II. as a dangerous and wicked radical? Yet a monk of the fraternity of Minori Osservanti, of Rome, has actually made an attempt to stab the ex-king, in pursuance of a vow which he confesses to having made, to kill that personage, as a renegade to the doctrine of the Divine right of kings on the day when he betrayed that right by granting a constitution to his Neapolitan subjects! The details of the attempt have been kept secret; but there seems to be no doubt of its having been made—of its having nearly succeeded, and of the ex-king having been so thoroughly terrified that he has been in a state of painful, nervous trepidation and terror ever since. His ex-Majesty has, however, been able to give his assent to the marriage of his half-sister, the Princess Maria Clementina Immaculata, with the Archduke Charles of Austria, a match got up by his uncle, the Count di Trapani.

Cardinal Liverain, whose strange book, telling such terrible "tales out of school," touching the Papal Household, the Cardinals, and the Roman Administration, and who has been struck off the list of the Papal Household, and is to be deprived of his hat, has come out with a second book on the same subject, even more damaging than the first. He described minutely and analytically the character of the Pope, whom he paints as "angelically good," but deplorably weak, and all the officers of his Court and Church; the latter, for the most part, in very sombre colours. As the Cardinal's position has given him access to all the secrets of the Papal Court, and to the most carefully-hidden documents, the scandal of his revelations is very great. He professes to wish to see the Church freed of the incubus of the temporal kingship, and replaced on the basis of the early Christian era; demands that Rome shall be made the capital of Italy, under Victor Emmanuel; and exalts the Jesuits as the salt of the priesthood, and the ardent apostles of liberty, civil right, and progress, a thesis which, considering the antecedents and teachings of that body, appears so singular as to have caused a suspicion of the Cardinal's having acted as its tool. While General Bosco is holding intercourse with the chiefs of the brigands whom Cialdini is endeavouring to extirpate, Mazzini has been vainly endeavouring to organise a committee in Rome for carrying out his views, using Garibaldi's name, not only without authority, but in defiance of his wishes. The National Committee has been on the alert, and has seized and destroyed 400 bonds of five carlini each, put forth in his own name by Mazzini, and intended for distribution among the lower classes of the Eternal City.

The Italian loan of five hundred millions (francs) has already been covered, by the principal capitalists of Europe, to the amount of 965 millions. The Industrial and Fine Arts Exhibition, to be opened in Florence on the 27th of next month, promises to be the rendezvous, not only of Italy, but of all the Liberal elements of Europe. The hostility of Austria having refused to allow the Italian railways to effect a junction with the line of the Vorarlberg, and Italy being thus threatened with the loss of its aim to attract the trade of Germany to Genoa, M. Barmann, ex Minister of Switzerland to the Tuilleries, has published a pamphlet, in which he combats the Italian project of making a railway across the Alps by the Luckmanier, and maintains that the proper route is by the Simplon, being the shortest for London, Paris, and Milan, and equally necessary to the interests of Italy and of Switzerland, whose Governments he calls upon to adopt this route, and to carry it into execution without delay. The Hungarians have welcomed Baron Vay and his colleague with serenades and acclamations of the most enthusiastic character. The Diet is deliberating with closed door on the Royal Rescript, and has named a committee of sixteen, with M. Deak at their head, to draw up the reply. The Rescript has excited much bitterness and contempt; and as it declares that the history, precedents, and legislation of Hungary are opposed to "the modern idea of a merely personal union between that kingdom and the empire," and sternly asserts the Emperor's determination never to give his assent to such an interpretation of the relation between Hungary and the empire, it is hard to see what common ground is left for an amicable adjustment of existing difficulties. The passages relating to the three kingdoms which Hungary claims to be dependent on her ancient Crown are also regarded with great bitterness; and the imperial counsellors are regarded as having studiously laboured to render reconciliation impossible. It is certain that the demands of Hungary, based on her ancient constitution and treaty-rights, would make her practically independent of the empire, and equally certain that she cannot renounce those rights without yielding the whole of the question at issue between herself and the House of Hapsburg. Will the Emperor proceed to extremities in his dogged determination to force the Hungarians to merge their ancient nationality in the empire which they hate; or will he act upon the spirit of the old coronation oath of the kings of Hungary, taken by them from King Andrew, in 1222, to the Emperor Leipold II, and not refused even by Maria Theresa, and which ran thus:—"If I, or any of my successors, at any time whatever, should attempt to infringe upon your privileges, it shall be permitted to you and your descendants to defend yourselves without being treated as rebels." The Reichsrath is to be adjourned for ten days; and, as M. Hein, the president, gives great offence to the members by his insolence and want of tact, it is thought that a new president will be named in his place.

Saxony has given itself a new civil code. The Duke of Saxe Gotha, accused, in a pamphlet, of doing more for the general welfare of Germany than of his own people, has republished this pamplet with his reply, vindicating his course, and pointing out the aims of his policy in a most liberal, frank, and outspoken style. The National Society is about to meet at Coburg, and will demand of all German Princes to make sacrifices of individual power in favour of the common country. It will also propose to elect, by universal suffrage, an Emperor of Germany, to be chosen for his individual worth and fitness, from among all the German princes, including the least considerable of them all. It will also demand the immediate construction of a German

Baron Schleinitz is about to retire into private life, and it is hoped that a more liberal policy may now be adopted by the Prussian Government. The latter is negotiating with the ancient princes and counts of Prussia for the restoration of certain old rights, honorific or real, and including exemptions from military service, taxation, &c., which will scarcely be regarded with favour by the Prussian people. The exemption from taxation will probably be transmuted by the Government into an indemnity; but the other immunities being out of harmony with the tendency of the epoch, one of these great nobles—the Prince of Wied—has already declared that, even if restored, he shall not avail himself of the restoration.

The season, which has been detestably cold and wet, seems to be improving as the comet takes itself away from the earth. The reports from the provinces are good, and crops of all kinds promise a fair average harvest, notwithstanding the obstacles of every kind that have been thrown in their way this year by the extraordinary caprices of the clerks of the weather office.

Saturday, August 10.

After all our uncomfortable barometrical vicissitudes, we are at last rejoicing in a degree of heat which, though strawberries and raspberries have disappeared before its bestowal, will give us, we would fain hope, some compensation in the shape of figs, grapes, and the other autumnal fruits, to say nothing of its effect on the vintage and harvests. Nothing can be more splendid than the aspect of Paris at this moment, its white houses, long street-vistas, and city groves, flooded with sunshine; and the royal guests whom the Emperor is entertaining at St. Cloud, and who are "doing" Paris and its sight-seeing with all methodic activity, worthy of Mr. and Mrs. Paragreen and their interesting family, are certainly beholding this brilliant city under the most favourable auspices. The Empress left Fontainbleau just before the King's arrival, and is gone to Eaux-bonnes, where she will take the waters in company with the Duchess-Dowager of Alba and Berwick, who has taken the children of her late daughter-in-law thither to meet their imperial aunt, named their guardian in the Duchess's will.

The Empress's absence from Paris at this time has, of course, given rise to a variety of rumours, some persons imagining that her well-known affection for the Pope had indisposed her to receive with pleasure a Protestant king, and one, too, who feels and shows a strong sympathy for Italy and its straightforward sovereign; others have supposed that the Emperor was anxious to get her out of the way, in order that he might be free to discuss with his guest various high matters of state-policy into which the Ministers did not wish her graceful Majesty to be initiated. The reason of the fair Eugenie's departure for her favourite watering place is, however, a very simple one. The summer being nearly over, and the king's visit having been decided on but a very short time ago, the Empress must either have given up her usual course of the waters of the Eaux-Bonnes, her sea bathing at Biarritz, or the king's visit; and considering how severely her health was shaken by the loss of her sister, her Majesty's physicians have very wisely insisted upon her giving up the latter and carrying out the programme decided upon at the commencement of the present season. The celebration of the Emperor's fete day, which will take place with uncommon splendour this year, will show the royal guests a sight such as only Paris can show. The review held in their honour, yesterday, in the Champ de Mars, was most magnificent; State dinners and receptions are given for them in rapid succession; and the operas and theatres, in spite of the heat, are doing their utmost to dazzle and amuse them. Versailles has been done up splendidly for the expected visit of the King of Prussia, who will not come, it seems, until the autumn, and the Swedish King will have the benefit of the clipping of alleys, and stocking of flower-beds, intended for his Royal brother. A grand dinner party of eighty covers, given by the Emperor in his honour, a few days since, at the lovely palace farm of Villeneuve l'Etang, just across the park of St. Cloud, was followed by a rowing party on its pretty sheet of water, and the letting off magnificent fireworks. The King of Sweden is a tall, handsome, large-shouldered man, with a dark bushy beard, and wears a green and yellow plume in his hat. He is the grandson of Bernadotte, and first cousin to the Emperor through his mother, Princess Josephine Maximilienne de Beauharnais, daughter of Prince Eugene de Beauharnais, Duke of Leuchtemberg. The present Queen of Sweden is the daughter of Prince William Frederick of Holland, uncle of the King of Holland. To-day, the Emperor, the King, and Prince Oscar, were to leave for the Camp of Chalons, where they will remain for some days. The Annual Rifle Match of Vincennes, the puny but persistent answer of French vanity to the Volunteer Movement across the Channel, is about to commence, despite the heat.

All the Sovereigns of Europe, and nearly all their Ministers being at watering places, or the sea-side, there is little stirring in diplomatic regions. Holland has recognised the Kingdom of Italy, and several of the German States are believed to be about to take the same step. Moreover, to the great satisfaction of all the friends of Italy, the new Italian Minister, Chevalier Nigra, has reached Paris, and has been received at the Tuileries with the usual ceremonial. The violent altercation between Marshal Goyon and Cardinal di Merode, has been followed by another row between the same high personages. A half-tipsy French soldier, a week ago, when passing before the Roman Hospital of Consolation, made some insulting remarks to the Pontifical sentinel at the gate, when the sentinel, in his irritation, slightly wounded the French soldier with his bayonet. The wounded man was carried into the hospital, where immediate attention was paid to him. The medical attendants espoused his cause, and one of them secretly left the hospital, and gave notice of the occurrence to the French officer in Command of the guard at the capital. M. de Merode, informed of the affray, sent orders to the hospital not to allow the French soldier to leave; but the French captain had, in the meantime, sent a patrol to that institution, and had carried off the wounded man. Next day the French authorities sent a commission to the hospital to make enquiries of the medical men who had dressed the soldier's wounds. M. de Merode forbade the latter from replying. What will be the result of the quarrel remains to be seen.

The Pope, who sent for Father Giacomo (the parish priest and friend of Cavour, who administered the sacraments to the great statesman before his death,) in order to question him respecting the last moments of his illustrious friend, has failed to learn anything from the priest, who declares that it is against his conscience to violate the secrets of the confessional, and has, consequently, been deprived of his parish by the Pope.

It is again rumoured that negotiations are going on with renewed activity between the Courts of Rome and Turin, France, it is stated, energetically backed by England, having urged the former to accept an arrangement, based upon the project set forth in Prince Napoleon's great speech in the Senate, by which the "Leonine" sides of Rome would be given to the Pontiff, with a zone of land towards Fiammiccino or Civita Vecchia, several palaces, a revenue of eight millions, and a number of very sweeping concessions for the religious orders patronised by the Romish Church. It is certain, however, that in the present temper of Italy, the majority even of the Catholics of that country would not view with favour any measures likely to add to the immunities of the so-called Religious Orders. General Cialdini, whose civil tact appears to be fully equal to his military skill, is becoming extremely popular in Naples. His energetic measures are fast clearing the country of the hordes of brigands let loose on it by the ex-king; the peasants themselves, from being the passive victims of these scoundrels, having been stimulated by Cialdini into becoming his most active auxiliaries in opposing them. The Neapolitan peasant, it is well-known, is extremely conservative where the safety of his fields and earnings is concerned, though quite incapable, from ignorance and the stolid indifference to all but material interests which has resulted from the rule of their late masters, of arriving at anything like a political conviction. Cialdini has therefore issued a proclamation, in which he says nothing about politics, but simply declares that he has come to clear the land of pillagers and marauders, and that the people, in whose interest he is acting, must aid him in the work of protecting their hearths and fields, and calls upon the peasantry to make a manly stand in defence of their homes and property, whenever attacked. The peasantry, en masse, appear to have understood this appeal; and to be banding together under the direction of the local authorities, all over the country, meeting the brigands wherever they show themselves, and fighting them with weapons, where weapons are to be had, with pitchforks, stones, and clubs, where nothing else happens to be handy. A call to protect order, or to bestir themselves in behalf of the King and Italian unity, would find them deaf; but now that they have got the idea that they must exert themselves to help Cialdini in saving their cottages from the flames, and their crops from plunder, they seem to be rising as one man in response to an appeal that they can both understand and appreciate.

All Italy is just now laughing at two young men who, having quarrelled at Milan, have been fighting a duel, without succeeding in hurting one another. They fired at twenty-five paces, then at twenty, and then at fifteen; but neither of them being hurt, they gave it up, and shook hands. To their horror, however, they then found that, although they had not succeeded in hitting one another, one of the balls had unfortunately wounded a poor cabman who had been engaged by the seconds to wait some distance from the scene of the duel with his vehicle, ready to carry off the homicide, should either of the principals have fallen! Happily, the poor cabman's wound is but slight; but what astonishing clever shots must the duellists have been!

The Archbishop of Naples, Cardinal Riario Sforza, has been requested to travel for the good of Italian tranquillity, and has gone to Rome, where a grand dinner has been given him in the Quirinal.

The new Chancellor of Hungary, Count de Forgach, shows himself by no means pliant to Austrian exigencies, and is consequently becoming unexpectedly popular in that country. The Diet of Agram has formally refused to elect deputies to the Reichsrath; the Croatians and Slavonians appear disposed to imitate this example, so that the "Triune Kingdom," instead of detaching itself from its ancient union with the kingdom of Hungary as the German Unionists have been exerting themselves to induce it to do, seems decidedly inclined to make common cause with the Hungarians. The people of the military confines are also again pressing on Vienna their demand for representation in the Hungarian Diet; they are bent on maintaining intact their old union with Hungary, which is highly beneficial to them, Fiume constituting the sole seaport of that kingdom. The Reichsrath is adjourned for ten days. M. de Schwerling's forthcoming bill on the Press, to be brought in on the re-assembling of that body, is declared by those who have had access to it, to be excessively illiberal, and likely to create much disappointment even in the "Hereditary Provinces" of Austria, to which it is to be confined, the Hungarian law of the Press of 1848 being revived for that country.

Disgraceful riots have taken place at Prague, where the people have been guilty of great excesses against the Jews, whose quarter they have invaded, breaking the windows, and insulting and wounding the Israelitish population. The riot has been produced, as usual in such outbreaks, by unfounded and grossly erroneous reports of misdoings on the part of the Jewish population. A servant from one of the hotels, happening to pass by the Jewish quarter, was importuned by a Jewish huckstress to purchase some of her wares. The man answered with a rude refusal, when he was roughly accosted by some Jews who were standing by, and who accused him of incivility to the woman. The servant, alarmed at the angry words of the Jews, ran off as fast as he could to the Christian quarter, where he declared that the Jews had been preparing to do him some bodily harm. The rumour immediately spread through the town that the Jews had murdered a Christian—several Christians—the story growing and becoming blacker as it went, and in less than an hour the tumult was universal—the ghetto was invaded by the excited rabble, and its inhabitants escaped destruction by barricading themselves in their houses. The tumult was renewed for several successive days; but the authorities at length called out the military, and with their aid put a period to this disgraceful outbreak. The Bohemians would not seem to be very correctly enlightened on the subject of civil right and liberty, notwithstanding their apparent determination to stand up for the old privileges of the Bohemian Crown. On the whole, the difficulties between Francis Joseph and the tenacious nationalities so naturally averse to be merged in the empire in which he is so naturally anxious to see them blended, has not made much progress towards a solution during the past week. The much harassed young Emperor, partially relieved on the score of the Empress's health by the favourable reports brought back by Colonel de Grunne, on his return from his mission of inspection to Corfu, has been making a little tour, in strict incognito, to Salzburg, where he met the Duke and Duchess of Modena (who have been inspecting their little army, on their way to Switzerland), and thence to Gratien, where he spent a few quiet days with the Queen of Greece, his aunt the Queen-Dowager of Prussia, and his sister-in-law, the Hereditary Princess of Tour and Taxis, who, at the entreaty of his Apostolic Imperial and Royal Majesty, has consented to abandon, for a time, her husband and principality, and proceed to Corfu, to keep her sister company until the spring of next year. Why the Emperor, so tenderly devoted to his amiable and charming wife, does not decide to send out the imperial children to Corfu, to give their mother the pleasure of having them about her, it is hard to say. It would be perfectly easy for him to send out with them a sufficient staff of servants, governesses, and protectors of every kind, to ensure their being taken the best possible care of, and there can be no doubt that the British Government and local authorities would gladly afford every possible facility for enabling him to render the Empress's arrangements in all respects satisfactory. It is said that the Emperor will visit Corfu in the course of the autumn.

The King of Prussia has thanked the world of Europe for the sympathy shown him on his late escape, by publishing a rescript to that effect in the official journal of Berlin. Every sovereign of Europe has sent him letters of felicitation, excepting those of Bavaria and Denmark. The former of these is busy with sea-bathing, and will do the polite and cordial as soon as he returns to his capital; but the latter has not been notified of the new King's accession, and abstains from felicitating him by way of reprisal. In view of the coming elections, the feudal and clerical party have put forth an extraordinary "programme," addressed to the electors, in which they explain their policy, stating that they "do not desire to overthrow the Constitution, which would be the means of replacing the country under the tyranny of the bureaucracy," but that they "call upon the electors to choose between independent royalty (by which odd expression they appear to mean absolutism) and the Parliamentary regime." The response of the Prussian electors to this singular appeal of the antediluvians can hardly be doubtful. The Prussian delegates in the diet have declared "theoretically" in favour of the proposition for adopting a unitary system of weights and measures. Unfortunately German jealousy of France will probably prevent the adoption, by that august body, of the metrical system found so admirably simple and convenient in this country, and which has just been adopted by a vote of the Italian Parliament. Prince Frederick William has replied to the request that he would preside at the approaching great gathering of the Gymnastic Society's at Berlin, by expressing his regret that he will not be able to do so, owing to his absence in England; but he assures them of his best wishes, and urges them to keep up their useful organisations with unflagging spirit. The King, probably owing to the Prince's wish, has written to the Minister of the Interior, desiring him not to interfere with any patriotic manifestations the gymnasts may wish to make (as he was beginning to do), and to allow them to display any flags they may choose to unfurl on the exciting occasion. A decision that will, no doubt, add to the King's popularity.

In the absence of any special news in the way of politics, we are glad to gather up any crumbs of amusing gossip respecting the doings of the Head of the State, and the partner of his brilliant fortunes. Of the first we hear that he has come out, physically speaking, quite "new" from the renovating effects of the Vichy water, and the long walks and drives he has been enjoying. A few days before he left Vichy, his Majesty started in a light open carriage which he drove himself, in company with Count de Morny, and a couple of servants, to visit the splendid chateau and park of the Duc de Galliera, and, when the party returned to Vichy they lost their way. The Emperor, being a great admirer of the beauties of nature, had turned out of his road to visit the hunting-box of Maultmon, in one of the most picturesque parts of the forest. After driving for some miles through magnificent scenery, without meeting a soul, they at last espied a peasant, and asked him if he could put them in the right road. The man, who recognised the Emperor, replied that he could, and his Majesty thereupon made him get into the carriage, and proceeded to drive according to his directions. They went on for a long time, turning now to the right, now to the left, and found themselves at length in a clover field where the road abruptly ended, as far from Maultmon, apparently, as when they had taken the man up. Notwithstanding the Emperor's habitual calmness, he could not help asking the peasant, somewhat impatiently, "Why did you say that you knew the road?" "Ah, Sire," replied the latter, "I knew it well enough when I met you; but after you spoke to me I felt that I had forgotten everything." Fortunately the party came upon a sounder head soon after, got better directions, and at length reached Vichy in safety, though very late in the night. Of the Empress, whose love of exercise and innocent fun is one of her most attractive characteristics, we hear that she amused herself at Fontainebleau, with her ladies, in devising a great variety of costumes, which they sported in the privacy of the reserved park, enacting the parts represented by their dresses. The favourite costume with the Empress was that of a shepherdess, in which, it is whispered, her Majesty looked extremely charming. Occasionally they all assumed the costume of sailors, and rowed about, by the hour, in light boats, upon the beautiful sheet of water behind the palace, the fair oarswomen trying who could row the fastest, and immensely enjoying the frolic.

Monday, August 19.

The festive doings of last Thursday, in honour of the fete day of the Imperial Dynasty, have been keeping Paris on the qui vive for a week. The new boulevards and the park of Monceaux, whose opening by the Emperor had been announced for the 15th, took place on the 13th with great pomp; the Emperor and his suite being received by the Prefect and his municipal colleagues, at the entrance of the new thoroughfare, under a splendid tent erected for the occasion, and from which, after inevitable speechifying, his Majesty and the high personages who attended him, departed on a brisk drive of several miles, under a blazing sun, along the new and magnificent lines of communication projected by the first Napoleon, and executed under the third. It is impossible for words to convey an adequate idea of the immensity of the scale on which the enlargement and intersection of this brilliant capital is being carried out; and by which the nine miles of thoroughfare inaugurated last Tuesday, constitute but a very small portion of the works now going forward. By the carrying out of these "improvements" Paris will comprise an area very much more considerable than that of London; though how so vast an agglomeration of houses is to be peopled it is difficult to imagine, as this increase of area and of accommodation is the result of strategical, dynastic, and vain-glorious considerations, rather than of the spontaneous growth and necessities of the capital. That Paris has hitherto been too small for the health and convenience of its inhabitants, is undeniable; but it seems probable that it will, ere long, be much too large. One agreeable consequence of the building over of the vast suburban districts, now being rapidly covered with houses, will be an enormous fall in rents, and consequently in the price of food, artificially raised here by farmers, graziers, gardeners, and shopkeepers, when the sudden inroad of pickaxes and shovels enabled the owners of houses to run up their rents to the fabulous sums they have been obtaining for the last five years. It is impossible to explore the new "quarters" that are springing into existence on every portion of the recent circumference of the capital without an exultant anticipation of a very considerable lengthening of the landlord-physiognomy of this part of the world, and at no very distant day.

But to return from this digression to the festivities which have called it forth. The new boulevards were gaily decorated with groves of young trees, cut down for the occasion, and placed where trees are one day to grow, banners, escutcheons, crowns, cyphers, garlands, and foliage; scaffoldings being ingeniously hidden by the lavish ornamentation thus bestowed upon them. A dense crowd lined every inch of the Imperial progress; the Emperor looked sunburned, in much better health, and in excellent spirits, and was well received—the French not being much given to shouting, but manifesting their welcome by a sort of continuous murmur intended to express their good feeling towards its object. The day was magnificent, though intensely hot, and brilliant illuminations of the New Park kept the Parisians on foot until late into the night. The Park, newly opened to the public, has hitherto formed part of the Domain of the Crown; it is an extremely beautiful piece of ground, with an undulating surface offering unusual resources to the landscape gardener, remarkably fine old trees, a famous grotto, fountain, and other points of interest, to say nothing of certain "ruins," carefully built as such, and now as carefully restored. In the total cost of the late "improvements" that have converted this lovely park into a place of public resort, there is included the sum of one million of francs for flowers and ornamental plants, among the latter being a great number of dwarf palms, that will prove very pretty if they do not die of nostalgia. The famous grotto being composed of a pile of huge fragments of rock collected from the Forest of Fontainebleau, and its interior being completely hung with stalactites and pieces of shining spar, presented a most beautiful spectacle on the night in question. The lights being so disposed on the outside of the grotto as to throw their rays into the cavity, whose surface blazed and sparkled with all the colours of the rainbow, looking as though hung entirely with diamonds. This brilliant affair crowning the top of a pretty mount, covered with clumps of noble trees, naturally found much favour in the eyes of the splendour-loving people of Paris.

The Emperor went next day to Chalons, where he is devoting his energies to the development of the pretty gardens in which the soldiers are to be trained as scientific gardeners, while amusing their leisure and improving their mess, health, temper, and morals, in the cultivation of their respective plots. The result of the experiment have proved so favourable in all respects, that the system of gardens is to be widely developed in connexion with the French army; it having been ascertained by careful investigation of statistics that the French soldier, though generally taken from the ranks of the peasantry, rarely returns to a country life on the expiration of his term of service, but, in the vast majority of cases, swells the population of the towns to the neglect and injury of the agricultural interest so vital to the prosperity of France. The Emperor hopes, by establishing courses of lectures on agriculture and horticulture at the military centres, in connexion with gardens, and, perhaps, eventually, with more extensive action in the way of cultivation, to interest the soldiers in the care of the soil, and, as the French journals somewhat magniloquently express it, "to give back to the rural districts, in place of the ignorant peasants taken from it by the conscription, scientific cultivators who shall be able to render to their country services no less important in the peaceful fields of agriculture than those they have been called on to render under the victorious eagles."

The fete of "The St. Napoleon" was none the less brilliant for the Emperor's absence. The usual salute from the guns of the Invalides ushered in the merrymakings of the day; the theatres were all opened gratis; shows, military pantomimes, in which the actors talked with as much animation as they gesticulated, regattas on the Seine, the climbing of greased poles with prizes on the top for those who reached them, and all the nondescript attractions of a Paris fête, were provided in the usual lavish abundance by a paternal municipality, which did not forget to begin the celebration of "the auspicious anniversary" by an extensive distribution of alms to the poor.

The illuminations of the evening were even more splendid than usual, and so numerous were the groups of the sons and daughters of "perfidious Albion," that one might almost have thought oneself in the heart of London, were it not that London could not, by any possibility, furnish such a scene. The long lines of brilliantly-lighted street-perspective render Paris an imposing sight any night in the year. On a gala night like that of last Thursday, it certainly may well impress all visitors as a most wonderful place. The vast circular area round the triumphal arch at the top of the Champs Elysees, which is to be the centre of the Paris of the future, was, on this occasion, the central and most brilliant point of the fête, the style of decoration being this year equally novel and beautiful, and consisting entirely of the facades of Chinese pagodas, towers, gateways, and colonnades formed entirely of coloured lamps and lanterns, with the addition of a few pennants bearing the Imperial crown and cypher. The decorations were extremely lofty, and the wooden scaffoldings which formed their groundwork were proportionally stout. The effect of this fine Place, with its glowing walls of fire, the Arch itself lighted with rows of small, bead-like jets of gas, and the splendid candelebra round its base converted into cones of flame, like fir-trees, was something magical. The vast crowd, so neat, quiet, polite, and lively, circulated about the place as though in a splendid saloon, or sat round its outer circle, many of the men, who seemed as though for once tired out by sightseeing lying comfortably on the clean pavement at the foot of the Arch.

The avenue of the Champs Elysees was hung with elegant festoons of the same yellow, red, and green lamps; the Rondpoint was ornamented in a style similar to the decorations of the Place; and most of the public buildings were tastefully lighted and ornamented. The fireworks were let off on the Champ de Mars, and were most magnificent; a column of fire, surmounted by a great eagle, and the Imperial N. changing to an illuminated cascade, and the latter being followed by a representation of the Summer Palace of the Emperor of China, extending about 250 yards in length. The sheaves of dazzling star-flowers, golden barley, silver rain, and other pyrotechnic wonders which accompanied the grand showings off of the lower region of the display, were fully worthy of the rest; and the concluding burst, an enormous sheaf composed of all the transitory, variegated splendours of the art, was, perhaps, the finest thing of the kind ever seen in Paris.

No accident occurred throughout the fete, with the exception of the fall of a rocket-stick upon the hand of Mr. Burlingame, the new American Minister to China, whose hand is so severely bruised by this unlucky mischance, that he will have some difficulty in getting the unfortunate member into travelling trim by the 26th instant, at which date that gentleman expects, in accordance with instructions just received from his Government, to proceed to Marseilles, taking the steamer of the 28th from that port to Suez, and thence to China, in company with the outgoing mail.

Little progress has been made by European diplomacy since my last. The Emperor still keeps guard at Rome round an unpopular Government and a fallen tyrant; and, despite perpetually-renewed rumours of an approaching evacuation of Rome, seems disposed to continue a protection which effectually prevents the Southern portion of the new kingdom from getting satisfactorily organised. Rumours of the approaching retreat of Cialdini and his civil delegates, supposed to find themselves unequal to the task imposed upon them, alternate with accounts of the worsting of brigands, and arrests of reactionaries, which are shortly to clear the country of its elements of disorder. The quarrel between General Goyon and M. de Merode has resulted in an arrangement by which the French General will henceforth communicate directly with Cardinal Antonelli; but though the French police has made various efforts to prevent the passing of brigands between Rome and Naples, and the sending of arms and money by the ex-King to the miscreants who are killing and plundering in his behalf—the activity of the reactionists congregated on the banks of the Tiber is as restless and as mischievous as ever. Yet, at this very moment, General Fanti, the stern, able, and patriotic Italian Minister of War, is not only visiting Chalons, but is being entertained, in most amicable style, in the Imperial quarters. However much, therefore, the friends of Italian unity may desire to see the new kingdom completed by the acquisition of its natural and necessary capital, and the deliverance of Venetia, it can scarcely be believed that the Cabinet of Turin sees in the Imperial policy—whatever be the real key to its seeing incongruities—any serious obstacle to the carrying out of its inevitable programme. Meantime, the recognition of Italy by other Powers is approaching; Belgium is about to follow the example of her neighbours; Russia is thought to be only waiting for a decent pretext for admitting the validity of the new royalty; Spain could not persevere in her present attitude if Russia changed hers; and Austria could scarcely accept the isolation in which she would then find herself in relation to Italy. Notwithstanding the many and serious difficulties which Italy still has to surmount, it would seem that Baron Ricasoli is not far out in saying, in his late circular to the representatives of Italy at the different European Courts, that the unification of Italy is virtually accomplished, and that Europe "seeing that there is not, in the Parliament, a single representative of the fallen dynasties, seeing also that we are well organised, armed, and strong, will ere long admit our right to possess entirely our own territory, and will appreciate our sincerity when we offer to the Church independence and liberty in the sphere of its religious functions." The Pope's malady (dropsy of the legs) appears to be increasing; and should the Imperial protectorate be destined to terminate with the life of the present wearer of the Pontifical Crown, it can scarcely be of much longer duration.

All the religious orders that have made themselves conspicuous for reactionary zeal are being suppressed in Italy. The Barnabites and Solopites, who are occupied in teaching are maintained, the Government reserving the right of inspecting their schools, and prescribing the books to be used in them. Some half dozen monasteries are maintained, as are the Mendicant Orders, who are popular with the people, and useful. Their numbers, however, are to be restricted. The other monks and nuns are put upon an allowance from the State of nine ducats a month, and are allowed to continue to live in their convents if they wish to do so. But as they cease to form religious corporations, the stay of their members becomes a purely voluntary affair, and they can no longer receive bequests or exist in a corporate body. They are, moreover, forbidden to receive more than six novices at a time. Large concessions are being made to the Garibaldians, whose reconciliation with the regular army may be confidently expected. This measure gives general satisfaction, and the adhesion of Nicotera to Cialdini's administration, in which he is now zealously serving, will doubtless be followed by the entrance of the majority of the leaders of the "party of action" into the service of the new Government.

Hungary and Warsaw are "preparing to be victims," determined to bate nothing of their ancient claims, and unable to obtain their recognition. A few days will show whether Austria, in dissolving the intractable Diet of Pesth, will resort to military arguments, or, as is more probable, will command the election of new deputies, and thus make a fresh attempt to arrive at a peaceful solution of the pending difficulties. The Crown Prince of Hanover has narrowly escaped drowning in his father's presence, while bathing in the sea at Nordernei.

Monday, August 26.

The almost tropical heat of a few days ago has been suddenly succeeded by a temperature that would be unseasonably cold for the end of October, and that is exceedingly unprofitable to all but the doctors, who are reaping an agreeable harvest in the domains of colds and cholerine. A week ago people were stricken down like flies by sunstroke; for the last four days the sunny side of the streets has been at a premium, and cool-weather garments have come into extensive use.

The Emperor has quitted the Camp of Chalons, paid a hasty visit to Plomberes, to see for himself how the new streets, parks, and bathing-houses are getting on, and is now at St. Cloud, doing the honours of that lovely summer-palace to his cousin, the heir-apparent to the Duchy of Baden, who, after visiting his Majesty at Chalons, is spending a few supplementary days in that charming locality. Much gossip is rife here touching the long stay at the Camp of the Princess Anna Murat, whom the gossips set down as the destined bride of the Crown Prince of Sweden until some one luckily remembered that the Prince is already blessed with a wife and two children; since which the tide of matrimonial speculation has set in towards his brother, the Prince of Dalecarlia, to whom the public now insists on awarding the hand of the only princess among the Murats who can boast of the least pretension to good looks. Among the visitors to Chalons were numerous other members of the Imperial family, Marshals, Generals, Ministers, and distinguished foreigners, including General Fanti, who has been lodged in the Imperial quarters and treated with great distinction. The presence at the camp of Cardinal Vardi, of the Papal household, so strenuously asserted by so many French and foreign journals, is denied by that prelate, who has written to some of the papers stating that he is visiting Brittany merely to see his relatives there—has had no interview with the Emperor, and is the bearer of no communications whatever from the Pope to his Majesty. Several English noblemen and officers have also been among the guests at the camp during the Emperor's stay there.

The fete of the 15th was celebrated there with much splendour and stir; but the fireworks frightened the horses, which began kicking and plunging until the whole of the stables were in a terrible uproar. Strange to say, most of the men being off to see the fireworks, the few who were on duty were unable to control the frightened animals, of which nearly nine hundred had kicked through their boxes and palings before the alarm could be given to their comrades by the sentries. The confusion created by the escape of these frightened horses may be imagined, and though they were vigorously pursued in every direction, some hundreds are still missing.

The Emperor has determined to push forward with all speed the opening of a great network of country roads all over France; the present amount of roadway being utterly insufficient. It is to be hoped that he will also throw his weight into the scale in the long discussions which are going on here in regard to the supply of water for this city. Several of the leading chemists have been analysing the waters of the Seine, as received for household use through this splendid city, and also those furnished by the various local springs; the results of these analyses being such as would fully justify a determination, on the part of the Parisians, to eschew water altogether, were it not that their wine, besides being largely diluted with these same waters, is also "doctored" to a frightful extent before it leaves the cellars of the virtuous winegrowers, who have raised the business of adulteration to an art; so that the Charivari may declare, with perfect truth, that every Parisian risks a double poisoning with every dinner, namely, one by water and one by wine. Hard and unspeakably dirty as is the water of Paris, the supply is equally unsatisfactory in point of quantity—Paris being among great cities, one of the worst supplied in this important respect. The normal quantity required per head is calculated at 150 litres per head daily. Rome, strange to say, is the best watered of capitals, its supply giving 944 litres per head; next comes New York, 568 litres; the great provincial towns of France have from 400 to 170 litres; Genoa, 120; Glasgow, 100; London 95. When the water employed in fountains and in watering the streets is deducted from its daily supply, Paris has but 35 litres of drinkable water for each of its inhabitants. It is probable that as soon as the thoroughfares of "imperial Paris" shall be definitely laid out, the modern Cæsar will insist on his creation being supplied with an abundant allowance of soft, clean water, brought from some more genial region than the clayey and limy valley of the Seine.

The Paris Journals that have been filling their gaping columns with their denunciations of the perfidious and insolent intervention of Great Britain on the Italian Shore, having found that this "alarming incident" of a few scores of British tars landing for a little exercise, with the consent of the proper authorities, can hardly be made to bear the strain of furious interpretation which they have been laying upon it, are now airing their wit and their good-temper on the imaginary insolence of the British Premier to the King of Sweden on his late visit to London, and on the presumed indignation of the royal guest of her Majesty at this manifestation of Ministerial anger at the suppose entente between France and Sweden, which is said to have excited the "spleen" of the "haughty" Minister. Considering the amount of trash, on the subject of their allies, dispensed in the course of each year to the newspaper-renders of la belle France, it is only marvellous that the latter, so little addicted to reading anything beyond their daily paper and still less given to travelling, should not be even fuller of Anglophobia than they are. It is, however, pretty certain that the new treaty of commerce, whatever else it may fail to do, will gradually bring about that better acquaintance which will be the best guarantee of more friendly sentiments between the two countries in the future. All the importers with whom I have conversed, whether French or English, are equally dissatisfied with the results of the new arrangements up to this time; but all agree that there never before was such a movement of the merchants and manufacturers of this stay-at-home people as at this time. The French dealers, accustomed to confine their energies within a very limited sphere, particularly sharp after infinitesimal savings, and the most suspiciously mistrustful of human creatures, come in crowds to inspect the patterns and samples of the army of British agents and importers already established here, and doing their utmost to established commission agencies to come into play on the opening of the French Customs in October next; but having carefully and minutely examined everything on the premises, and made notes of the prices, they go straight on to England, without giving an order here, that they may visit the manufacturing centres themselves, and ascertain whether they cannot obtain the goods they desire on lower terms than those of the pioneers in Paris. I could instance, among other similar instances, a skilful and well-known agent for Manchester goods, who has been here for the last four months, and who, if one tithe of the dealers who have inspected his samples, and studied his price-list, day after day, could have brought themselves to the point of ordering, would be already in a flourishing position. As it is, though he is compelled to pay for his warerooms, and subsidiary arrangements, at the present exorbitant rate of Paris prices this gentleman has not yet received one single order, great or small. Every one of the innumerable dealers who keep himself and his staff of clerks incessantly busy, has gone over to England to visit Manchester and its kindred towns to ascertain on what terms they can buy from the manufacturers themselves. As the terms offered by Mr. M—— are precisely those which are demanded by the makers, he hopes that the enquiry which the French dealers are personally making, each for himself, will prove to them that they can procure the goods they need as advantageously from him as from the makers, and that he may thus eventually succeed in establishing the agency they reject at present.

The export of fancy articles from Paris to England is going on merrily; but the wine-growers are greatly disappointed. The amount of duty still levied on French wines in British ports is too considerable to allow of these wines coming fairly into competition with English beer; and the French regard this fact as a great grievance. Whether the thin, astringent, and comparatively unnutritious wines of France, which do a good deal into drying its people into their habitual wiriness, will ever supplant beer among the mass of the British people, may be well doubted: but that a certain proportion of these wines, especially the growths of the Burgundy districts, might, if they could be got unadulterated from the growers (a very difficult feat to accomplish), might enter with beneficial effect into the public consumption, and would do so, were they procurable in England at a lower price, can hardly be doubted. At all events, the French growers rail against the treaty very bitterly, and regard the Emperor as having wilfully victimised them for the sake of currying favour with English ironmasters.

Meantime, trade is almost stagnant in this country; the conflict in the American States aggravating the bad effects of the general disquiet and heaviness of the European markets. The exports to America show a falling off in all departments. Wines, 63,759 hectolitres in 1861 against 131,600 in 1859; brandy, 13,428 hectos, against 50,297; millinery, 112,527f., against 547,362f. The export of silk goods has fallen from 20,719 metrical quintals (224½ lbs. each) in 1859 to 15,903; a fall owing in great measure to the American war. The metrical quintal of silk being worth 10,000f., there is a diminution of nearly £7,000,000 sterling in this article alone.

In Italy, which expects daily to see itself formally recognised by Russia, Cialdini is sweeping the Neapolitan brigands closer and closer upon the sea; but the disturbances being incessantly fomented by daily supplies of men and money from Rome, the deliverance of this lovely region seems hopeless, so long as gangs of ruffians are prompted to arson, pillage, murder, and violence of every kind by the reactionaries who, under shelter of French intervention, are converting Rome into a focus of cruel and criminal contrivance. The atrocities committed by the brigands and their partisans, in which the complicity of the ex-king and a numerous party in the Pontifical Court can no longer be denied, almost surpass belief. To instance only the revolting details of the horrors enacted by these scoundrels at Pontegondolfe, as narrated by the Italia, of Napies, what argument in favour of the overthrown regime can its partisans derive from the fact that the unfortunate Lieutenant Caccia, and his brave band of thirty-nine men, having been treacherously surprised by the bands of scoundrels that were filling that village and Casalduni with flames and death, their right hands were cut off at the demand of a priest, who declared that "hands which had fought against the Pope were excommunicated;" some were tied to the tails of horses and dragged along till they were killed; others had their eyes torn out and their flesh torn from their bones, and others were roasted alive. When the 350 Bersaglieri under General Count Negri, entered the scene of these atrocious cruelties, the sight of the head of Caccia stuck upon a cross, and of the mutilated remains of their comrades, filled them with fury, and they could not be restrained. The two villages were taken after a brief but fierce contest, and utterly destroyed by the troops. With the brigands perished, unhappily, many innocent persons; but the long series of frightful outrages of which the troops had been constantly coming on the traces, and the evidences of fiendish cruelty afforded by the mangled limbs and bodies of their brethren, had naturally raised their indignation, and called forth their revenge, to a pitch that, at length, overbore the excessive longanimity of the Italian programme. General Penelli is making such progress among the brigands of Benevento that the campaign in that quarter is virtually over. The most ferocious of the brigands, who are escaped or liberated convicts, are among the hills, and may hold out until the rainy season. But the very smallest hamlets are now in arms against them, and will not allow them a moment's rest anywhere. Whole days of gallant resistance, often headed by the village priest, have been made against invading bands of brigands in many rustic localities; one of the most courageous of these being that which has occurred at Caprodise, in the Terra di Savore, where ten villagers, under the direction of their priest, Mossari, resisted the onset of a numerous band of brigands for an entire day and succeeded in putting them to flight. Such is the astonishment and indignation of all the Liberal portion of the French people at the permission accorded to Francis II. to remain in Rome, hatching all these horrors at his leisure under the wing of the French eagle, that it seems impossible for the Emperor to continue much longer his present role in Italy, notwithstanding the recent assertion of the Patrie that "the French army went to Rome in the interests of France, and will stay there as long as French interests require the presence there of French arms." But, whether the Emperor be carrying out a clever scheme for enabling the Absolutists to ruin themselves in the public opinion of Europe, in which case he will quit Rome at "the right moment," as his friends believe, or whether he is really playing the double game, for the accomplishment of improbable schemes of French aggrandisement, as his enemies declare, and in which case he must sooner or later confront a coalition that would be fatal to his dynastic aspirations, a longer perseverance in the inexplicable part he has so long played in Italy, could be productive of only temporary injury to that country, without being capable of throwing in the way of the new kingdom any serious obstacle.

The Hungarian Diet is dissolved, and is about to separate, having recorded its protest against the action of the Court of Vienna, and declared the determination of Hungary to reserve its ancient rights, and passively await the moment for their successful assertion. The supremacy of Hungary being as distasteful to the countries formerly dependent on the Crown of St. Stephen as is now the supremacy of the Austrian empire to Hungary, it would hardly seem that the best interests of the latter were likely to be attained by the isolation which it seems anxious to achieve, even should that end be reached. Should Hungary, as seems probable, maintain its present attitude, it can only be governed by a return to the Absolutist regime which the Emperor, taught by adversity, seems anxious to replace by constitutional Government. Yet a retrograde movement would involve perils so dangerous to the existence of the empire that the Austrian Government will scarcely determine upon such a course without having exhausted all possible attempts at a reconciliation, which seems equally desirable for all parties. Meantime the young Empress is regaining her health in the delicious climate of Corfu; and the Emperor, who shows in a more amiable light in his family relations than he has hitherto done in regard to the liberal aspirations of the century, has caused a toy to be made for his son and heir, Prince Rudolphe, representing in relief the road between Vienna and Corfu. This toy is said to be a masterpiece; the Oest Deutsche Post grows quite enthusiastic over it, says the representation of the Dalmatian Mountains excites the admiration of the Imperial staff, and declares it to be "like certain story-books printed for the amusement of children, but which persons of every age may read with instruction and delight."

A French journal of Frankfort having mentioned that a rascally butcher in a Bohemian village having sold his wife to an innkeeper there, and both being cited to answer for the offence before the tribunal, declares that this episode recalls "the famous fairs of Smithfield."

A sword of honour, said to be very magnificent, and sent to Garibaldi by his admirers in Australia, was presented to the Italian hero at Caprera, on the 15th instant. The reports that have reached us to-day respecting the General's speech on receiving this gift, attribute to him language so violent respecting "the shameful truce of the present moment," and his pain at "the delay which poltroons and fools do not cease to thrust between offended Italy and my duty," that they will hardly be received as authentic until confirmed by fuller details of the proceedings.

LATEST AMERICAN NEWS.

BATTLE OF MISSOURI.

FROM OUR CITY CORRESPONDENT.

[This news not in London papers yet. Monday, 26th August.]

Liverpool, Sunday, 25th August.

The royal mail steamship Africa, Captain Shannon, arrived in the Mersey, at two o'clock this afternoon. She brings New York advices to the 14th instant.

An important battle had occurred at Springfield, Missouri. The New York Herald of the 14th instant gives the following details:—

"The most important news from the seat of war which we have to record to-day comes from Missouri, where the gallant General Lyon has been contending in the south-western portion of that State with an immense force of the rebels; and this news, we regret to say, tells of the death of General Lyon and the retreat of his army.

"It will be remembered that, on the 8th instant, General Lyon had a fight with his advance guard and that of the rebels under Ben M'Cullock, at Day Spring, near Springfield, where he endeavoured to draw the latter out of his shelter in the woods. It appears from official intelligence received from Major-General Fremont, at St. Louis, from one of General Lyon's aids, that the fight was renewed on the 10th, at half-past six. Three columns of the Union forces, respectively commanded by General Lyon, General Siegel, and Major Sturgess, numbering in all 8000, being engaged on one side, and a body of rebels, under General M'Culloch and General Price, numbering 23,000, on the other. The battle took place at Davis Creek, about nine miles south-east of Springfield. Against this immensely superior force, which was composed of regiments from Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Texas, the troops of General Lyon were still able to maintain their ground, and pressed the enemy back to their encampment on Wilson's Creek, which General Siegel actually occupied for the night; but fearing a flank movement of the rebels, he withdrew his small force.

"General Lyon was killed while charging at the head of his column. The engagement was a severe one. Eight hundred of the Union troops are reported killed and wounded. The loss of the rebels was very heavy, and is said to include Generals M'Culloch and Price. All the tents and wagons of the rebels were lost.

"General Siegel effected a retreat to Springfield in good order, and from there fell back on Rolla, the terminus of the south-west branch of the Pacific Railroad, leaving only one gun behind on the field. He captured ninety prisoners, and brought back as a trophy the horse and sword of Ben M'Cullock, together with 25,000 dollars in specie from the Springfield bank.

"At last report there was no appearance of pursuit on Siegel's retreating columns, and his army was considered safe.

"The report of the rebel loss has been confirmed by the statements of prisoners taken, and their numbers have been ascertained from the muster rolls found on the field.

"A despatch, confirming the account of the battle, and the death of General Lyon, was received yesterday at the War Department from General Fremont."

A telegram, dated St Louis, August 13, says —"In consequence of the recent special trains on the South West Branch, and the extensive preparations made here for sending reinforcements to General Siegel, no trains came from Rolla to-night. Nothing further has been received from Springfield. The police office was taken possession of this evening by the United States authorities, and special orders issued to place the Home Guards under arms at the various armouries, to be prepared for any emergency. The city is quiet now, and no apprehensions of disturbance are felt. It is understood General Fremont will declare martial law to-morrow. A loan of 250,000 dollars was effected from our banks to-day, by General Fremont. Heavy siege guns are being mounted to command the various approaches to the city. It is stated that General Siegel would have lost another gun had he not compelled the prisoners to drag it off the field."

No military movement of importance had taken place at Washington.

Orders had been issued from the navy department for the construction of five out of the twelve steam gunboats authorised by Congress.

Charles J. Faulkner, of Virginia, lately United States minister to France, had been arrested at Washington by the Provost Marshal, on a charge of treason. The charge is based on acts committed at Paris, in purchasing arms for the seceded States while representing the United States Government, and endeavouring to procure the recognition of the Southern Confederacy by the Government of France. Mr. Faulkner was sent to jail by order of the Secretary of War, and a formal examination would take place immediately.

The appropriations made by the late Congress for the support of the war amounted to 259,675,990 dollars.

Major-General Wood had been ordered to Fort Munroe to supersede General Butler, in command of that post.

The New York Herald makes the following strange statement:—"The offer made by Garibaldi to our Government of his services has been accepted, and he is to receive the rank of Major-General in our army. His name and presence will be of immense value to the Union cause. They will prove to the English and French Governments that it has the sympathy of the friends of human freedom throughout the world, and that any interference in favour of the South will expose them to a severe retribution at their hands."

The following European consular appointments had been made:—To Glasgow, John S. Prettiman, of Delaware; to Londonderry, Thomas M'Cunn, of New York; to Revel, Henry B. Stacy, of Vermont; to Paris, John Bigelow, of New York; to Leghorn, Andrew J. Stevens; to Amsterdam, F. J. Klanzes.

Information received from St. Thomas's state that the notorious privateers Sumter and Jeff Davis were located, the former at Curacoa, and the latter at St. John's, Porto Rico.

It is stated that there are 271,000 Secession troops in the state of Virginia.

The Minister of the Interior was about to pay a visit to New York, in order to attend a meeting of the United States Marshals, to confer with them as to the best means of more effectually suppressing the slave trade.

DETAILS OF THE BATTLE.

(From the New York Times, August 14.)

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, August 13.

The War Department to-day received a despatch from Major-General Fremont, saying, among other things, that General Lyon's Aid reports an engagement, with a severe loss on both sides, and that General Lyon was killed.

General Siegel was in command, and retiring in good order from Springfield towards Rolla.

The following is the official report received to-night by General Scott:—

Head-quarters Western Department, St. Louis, August 13th, 1861.

Colonel E. D. Townsend.

General Lyon, in three columns under himself, Generals Siegel and Sturges, attacked the enemy at half-past six o'clock on the morning of the 10th, nine miles south-east of Springfield. The engagement was severe. Our loss was about 800 killed and wounded. General Lyon was killed in a charge at the head of his column. Our force was 8000, including 2000 Home Guards. The muster-roll reported taken from the enemy gives their forces at 23,000, including regiments from Louisiana, Tennessee, and Mississippi, with the Texan Rangers and Cherokee half-breeds. This statement is corroborated by prisoners. Their loss is reported as heavy, including Generals M'Culloch and Price. Their tents and waggons were destroyed in the action. General Siegel left one gun on the field, and retreated to Springfield, whence, at three o'clock on the morning of the 11th, he continued his retreat on Rolla, bringing off his baggage trains and 250,000 dollars in specie from the Springfield Bank.

J. C. FREMONT, Major-General Commanding.

St. Louis, Tuesday, August 13.

The following is the official report of the fight near Springfield, on Saturday last, forwarded by one of General Lyon's aids:—

To Major-General Frement.

General Lyon, in three columns, under himself and General Siegel, and Major Sturges, of the cavalry, attacked the enemy at half-past six o'clock on the morning of the 10th, nine miles south-east of Springfield. The engagement was severe. Our loss is about 800 killed and wounded. General Lyon was killed in a charge at the head of his column. Our force was 8000, including 2000 home guards. The muster rolls taken from the enemy give his strength at 23,000, including regiments fnom Lousiana, Mississipi, and Tennassee, with Texan Rangers, and Cherokee half breeds.

Their loss is reported heavy, including Generals M'Culloch and Price. This statement is corroborated by prisoners. Their tents and wagons were destroyed in the action.

General Siegel left only one gun on the field, and retreated to Springfield with a large number of prisoners, at three o'clock in the morning of the 11th. He continued his retreat upon Rolla, bringing off his baggage trains and 250,000 dollars in specie from the Springfield Bank.

Early on Saturday morning General Lyon marched out of Springfield to give battle to the enemy. He came up to him at Davis Creek, on Green's Prairie, a few miles south-west of Springfield, where he had taken a strong position on rolling ground.

At twenty minutes past six o'clock in the morning General Lyon fired the first gun, when the battle immediately began. Severe cannonading was kept up for two or three hours, when the fire of Captain Tatten's artillery proving too severe for the enemy, they gradually fell back towards their encampment on Wilson's Creek. General Lyon's cavalry, posted on the enemy's left flank, and General Siegel's artillery on the right, there began a terrific attack, and spread slaughter and dismay in the ranks of the enemy, pursuing them to their camp, shells from Tatten's artillery setting fire to their tents and baggage waggons, which were all destroyed.

A Louisiana regiment and a Mississippi regiment seemed to have suffered most in the fight, and were almost annihilated.

Some time in the afternoon, as General Lyon was leading on his column, his horse was shot from under him. He immediately mounted another, and as he turned around to his men, waving his hat in his hand and cheering them on to victory, he was struck in the small of the back by a ball, and fell dead to the ground.

The command then devolved on General Siegel. Pursuit continued till nightfall, when our little army rested for the night in the encampment of the enemy.

Sunday morning, General Siegel, fearing the enemy might recover and attempt to cut his command off from Springfield, fell back upon that city, where the Home Guards were stationed. On reaching Springfield, fearing the great numbers of the enemy might induce them to get between him and Rolla, General Siegel concluded to fall back upon Rolla with his provision trains, and meet the reinforcements which were on the way to him. At the latest moment of the departure of the messenger, the enemy had not been seen, and it is probable General Siegel has not been disturbed in his march.

Ninety of the rebels were captured, among whom a colonel of distinction, the messenger not remembering his name.

The sword and horse of General M'Culloch were the trophies taken.

Reinforcements are on the way to Rolla, and General Siegel and his army may be considered safe.

WAR ON THE COAST OF AFRICA.

ENGLISH CONFLICT WITH THE NATIVES—TWO THOUSAND KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Bell's Weekly Messenger of August 17th says:—

At Porto Novo matters continued unsettled, and the West African Herald gives the following description of the battle of Porto Novo:—

"It has already been recorded in this journal that, four months ago, the late Mr. Foote, her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, went up to Porto Novo, in the gun-boat Brune, for the purpose of negociating with the king of that place. The King having refused to accede to the terms of the treaty, and treating the Consul's messages with contempt, Mr. Foote caused a shot to be fired over the town. This having produced no effect, some shots were fired into the town, and the Brune left the place. The Portonovians, much elated at the departure of the Brune, congratulated themselves, and declared that if the vessel came again they would have her up on the beach, and convert her into a war canoe for the King. On the 26th of April last, the Consul went up with a considerable force to recommence hostilities. Commodore Edmondstone commanded in person. The following is from the native journal Iwe Iwhn, published at Abbeokuta:—

"The expedition consisted of the Brune and Fidelita; each of these had attached to it a number of boats, ten it is stated. Four of these were armed with twenty-four and twelve-pounder howitzers, the remaining six were rocket boats. The expedition reached the barrier above Badagry at four p.m. on the afternoon of Thursday, and after two hours hard work, pulling and hauling, the sailors effected a narrow passage, which was forced by the Fidelita. She was immediately followed by the Brune, and thus in the space of two hours and a-half was overcome what it had taken the Portonovians six weeks and more to prepare. Some Iso canoes made a miserable attempt to save their reputation, by firing a few shots, but a rocket or two from the long 52 of the Brune sent them flying up the river at their best pace. Next morning, at seven a.m., the flotilla had reached Porto Novo, and as soon as they came abreast of the town, a heavy musketry fire was opened upon them from both sides of the river, which, however, was not replied to by the English for some little time. When once the boats opened fire with rockets, shell, and shot, it was vigorous and well directed—so much so, that within an hour the town was in flames, which gradually increased, until they rose high above the lofty trees that hitherto afforded the inhabitants grateful shade. The Iso canoes again took to flight, and remained through the day far out of gunshot, and watched the game of war in tolerable security. The boats of the squadron were in two divisions, one under the Commodore, the second under Captain Raby, of H. M. S. Alectro, Finding the town burning furiously in their rear, the defenders of this den of infamy ran for the beach, and advantage was taken of this by Captain Raby, V.C., who was in his gig with two men, to land and spike a gun, not, however, without being severely wounded by the explosion of the gun during the act of spiking. Seeing that the natives had not plucked up courage to cut off this party, permission was given to about fifty marines and blue jackets to land, in order to set on fire some well built houses that had hitherto withstood the rockets and flames.

"The landing was effected without molestation, and a new quarter of the town was hereby set fire to. It appears that the warriors had not up to this time retreated from the town, for Captain A. S. Jones, 2nd West India Regiment, encountered one standing in a doorway, whom he shot with his revolver; and met a second, whom he was about also to despatch, when his revolver missed fire, and had the native rushed at him he must have cut him down before he could draw his sword, but deeming prudence the better part of valour he took to his heels and hid himself.

"The town now being in this quarter thoroughly fired, at 11·30 the troops re-embarked, and returned to their ships and—dined. At one o'clock, being refreshed, and a fresh supply of ammunition served out, the boats of Captain Raby's division formed in line abreast, and advanced within fifteen yards of the reeds, from whence the natives still kept up a brisk fire from a point rather lower than where the gun-boats had anchored, and where it was subsequently discovered they had an ambuscade. From this point it was found difficult to dislodge them, until rockets and round shot found out their weak point, and sent them flying in all directions. Great havoc was committed in their retreating ranks by the grape and canister of the boats, as well as the well-directed shots of the marines. The opportunity was now seized upon by Captains Raby and Jones to land and spike a second gun, and carry off the last flag. It was now seen how great had been the havoc inflicted upon the enemy, by whose own account they admit their loss to be 1000 killed, and as many wounded. After this the firing became very weak and desultory, so the English amused themselves by firing shot and shell at the principal houses left standing.

"About 4 p.m., the gun-boats and flotilla steamed away for Lagos, and rejoined the squadron outside the bar; the vessels composing it have since steamed off in various directions.

"The loss on the side of the English was only one man killed, and five slightly wounded."

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT ON THE LONDON AND BRIGHTON RAILWAY.

(From the Times, August 26.)

ONE of the most terrible accidents which has occurred since the introduction of our railway system took place yesterday (Sunday) on the London and Brighton Railway in the Clayton tunnel, about five miles from the Brighton terminus. It will be necessary, to enable the public to arrive at a correct knowledge of the exact circumstances, to state that an excursion train leaves Portsmouth for London at 6 a.m., calling at all the stations on the south coast line, and is made due for departure from Brighton at 8.5 a.m. There is also an excursion train which takes its departure from Brighton every Sunday morning at 8.15, which runs to London without stopping at any of the intermediate stations. The regular Parliamentary morning train stopping at all stations leaves Brighton at 8.30, being due in London at 10.40. There are besides occasional excursion trains from Brighton; but whenever these trains are put on special instructions are sent out to the various station-masters, signalmen, and other subordinate officers within whose province it may come that the line should be duly clear for the regular traffic, and proper caution observed. It will be noted hereafter that there has been some unexplained failure of a portion of these arrangements. To that circumstance may be attributed the terrible calamity which has taken place.

On Sunday morning, the Portsmouth train, which passes through Brighton for London at 8·5 a.m., left the station about its appointed time, and duly arrived at the Clayton tunnel, where the "all right" signal was displayed. The train passed on without interruption. Immediately after the 8·15 from Brighton came within sight of the signalman. He, remembering that the Portsmouth excursion train had only gone by a very short time previously, alleges that he attempted to put on the "stop signal" which he found would not act. He then showed a red flag, indicating danger, to the driver of the Brighton train, who, however, was close upon the signalman's box, near the tunnel's mouth, at the time. The engine driver, however, with great presence of mind, thinking doubtless, from the signal, that the train which he knew had preceded him had not got clear, immediately reversed his engine. The impetus, however, with which he had been travelling prevented the train being pulled up before it had proceeded some distance into the tunnel. Of course the number of tunnels between London and Brighton renders it necessary that special precautions should be adopted for preventing accidents, and there is a man stationed at both ends of each tunnel, whose duty it is to telegraph the entry and egress of all trains in order that two trains shall not be in the tunnel at the same time on the same line of rails. The signalman at the Brighton end of the Clayton tunnel, perceiving that, in spite of the red flag, the second train did not stop, imagined that the driver had not seen it, and immediately telegraphed to the other end of the tunnel to know whether the train had passed through, and received for answer that it had. He did not know at the time that the driver of the second train had seen the red signal, that he had reversed his engine, and that the train was in backward motion towards the south, or Brighton end of the tunnel. Meanwhile the 8·30 stopping-regular Parliamentary train came in sight, and the signalman, having received the answer above referred to, gave the usual signal for the train to proceed, which it did at its ordinary speed. Within a very short distance of the mouth of the tunnel a fearful crash ensued, the second train backing having come into violent collision with the other train, which was rushing forward. The shrieks and cries are described as being most fearful and heartrending, the darkness tending to heighten the terror of those who were uninjured, and leaving them powerless to aid the wounded.

After a short time some passengers in the first-class carriages procured lights from the roofs, and proceeded to render every assistance in their power. The extent of the fearful catastrophe then became apparent. The engine of the Parliamentary train had smashed the last carriage in the excursion train, which had mixed compartments for luggage at one end, passenger seats in the middle, and a guard's break at the other end. The locomotive had been pitched over the last carriage to the back of the last carriage but one, and shivered it into fragments. This carriage comprised four compartments, each containing ten persons, and the consequences cannot be adequately described; the unhappy passengers were scattered and mutilated in all directions, several were scalded with the boiling water from the engine, and their yells of agony were pitiable in the extreme. The telegraph was immediately set to work, communicating the terrible nature of the calamity to Brighton. As speedily as possible Mr. Hawkins, the traffic manager, Mr. Denvil, his assistant; Mr. Craven, superintendent of the locomotive department, with a numerous body of workmen and others proceeded by special engine to the spot. They were accompanied by Dr. Burrell, Dr. Hall, Messrs. Furner, Pocock, Tatham, Jowers, Judd, and other eminent medical men, in order to alleviate, as far as possible, the sufferings of the wounded. Unfortunately, in too many cases, all medical aid was unavailing. Upon the fragments of the carriages being removed upwards of twenty persons were found to be dead. The engine (as our reporter was informed) had literally sunk upon the second carriage, and the bodies of several of the sufferers were underneath. They had either been smashed or scalded to death. One unfortunate woman had both her legs cut off just above the knees, and she was quite black in the face. Another woman had her scalp torn completely off and both her arms broken. One man had his face crushed in such a manner as to force his eyeballs from his head. A strong body of men, under the direction of Mr. Craven, proceeded to clear the line, which was comparatively uninjured. Mr. Hawkins despatched the uninjured part of the train to London.

The bodies of the dead, 22 in number, were carefully placed in carriages which had followed the special engine from Brighton, and the wounded received the most careful and unremitting attention from the medical gentlemen who were in attendance. As soon as possible the wounded, the dying, and the dead were conveyed to Brighton, where the unhappy sufferers who have died were placed on tables and forms in the library at the company's offices to await identification. The wounded were taken in carriages and flys to the Sussex County Hospital, where Mr. Furner, who accompanied them from the scene of the disaster, attended to their necessities, assisted by Messrs. Hollis, Catts, Lowdell, Blaker, and other medical gentlemen. Nine of the passengers had been taken into the hospital, and two of the cases were at once seen to require surgical operations. In one instance, a man named Anthony Kean, a tailor, who resided at 51, Goswell-road, London, had his left leg amputated, and William Arnold, of New England Farm, near Brighton, had his right leg amputated, the left leg being fractured. Kean was stated to be sinking, the state of the femoral artery rendering recovery scarcely possible. Of the other patients at the Hospital, Thomas Noble, of No. 5, Richardson-street, Bermondsey, had a severe wound on the right temple; George Noble, of No. 8, Frederick's-place, Brighton, several severe wounds on the head; Timothy Tester, of 15, Frederick's-place, Brighton, several bruises; a child about two years and a-half old, name unknown (supposed to be a child of one of the deceased), severe scalds; Thomas Parker, 23, Brunswick-place, Brighton, severe injury to the knee and right arm; Elizabeth Westcott, a leg broken in two places, and her daughter, contusions on both sides, and also some scalds on her legs.

Besides the above, other wounded persons were conveyed to their own residences in Brighton. Among these were Mr. Surman, a visitor from London, who lives at Webb's County-terrace, New Kent Road, whose hands and legs are much bruised. Miss Atkinson, who also lives at Webb's County-terrace, received severe injuries on the head. Two other ladies, who were of the same party, suffered much from the effects of fright and being severely shaken. Mr. James D. Child had his face much bruised; Mr. James Parson, of 32, Mighill-street, Brighton, his mouth and chin much cut and several teeth knocked out; Mr. Swaisland, bird-stuffer, Queen's-road, Brighton, his leg fractured; Mrs. Dickenson, internal injuries; Mrs. Hodges, Brunswick-place, Brighton, her knee much hurt; Thomas Bedford, Orchard-terrace, Kensington, his thigh severely lacerated.

Of the twenty-two persons who lost their lives, twelve were identified in the course of the afternoon.

The bodies, having been carefully laid out, were searched under the direction of Mr. White, chief constable of Brighton, and superintendents Crost and Barrenden. Several of the above were identified by letters and papers which were found upon them. When the bodies of the dead had been properly arranged, Mr. White instructed the police constable to admit such persons as stated they had relatives or friends who had gone by either of the trains from the town that morning, and they were allowed to pass through the room in which the unfortunate deceased lay, with a view to ascertain who might be among them. The recognition in one or two instances were most melancholy, the husband seeing the mangled corpse of his wife, who a few hours before had left him in health and happiness; the daughter weeping over her mother's shattered remains.

The intelligence of the accident first reached the metropolis when the uninjured portion of the train arrived at London Bridge. About thirty passengers came up by this means, several of whom had sustained injuries more or less severe. The news soon circulated, and throughout the day many anxious inquiries were made at the terminus. It is due to the officials of the company to state that they did everything in their power to satisfy the doubts of all who made application to them. Towards the time the excursion trains were expected to return, the crowd was very great at the station, and knots of persons listened with painful interest to the details supplied by eye-witnesses of the accident, and by others who had gathered the particulars during their visit to Brighton.

A passenger who was in the train thus describes the accident,—"I noticed after we had proceeded a short distance into the tunnel that the speed of the train slackened, and I think I heard the whistle sounded, but of that I am not certain. I then saw that we were getting towards the end of the tunnel. I imagined I heard another train coming up, but before I had satisfied my mind upon the point I was thrown off my seat. I then heard fearful screams, and the steam of an engine hissing in a terrific manner. When I got out I saw that a great number of passengers were lying under the engine, which had jumped right upon the carriage second from the end of the train. The boiling water was pouring out over the people, and the steam prevented any one seeing any distance. We all did what we could to render assistance, but we could not accomplish much in consequence of the engine being on the top of the people, and by reason of the hot water and steam. I came up to London by the train which was sent off after the accident."

TEN GENTLEMEN DROWNED NEAR SCARBOROUGH.

A most deplorable accident has cast a gloom over that popular watering-place, Scarborough. On Monday morning, the 19th instant, a party of eleven gentlemen took a pleasure boat of moderate size for an excursion to Flamborough. They were attended by a boatman and a boy. The weather was squally, but the sail was a pleasant one, though one of the gentlemen, who felt himself indisposed, returned by rail from the point of the excursion to Scarborough. When the boat returned the weather was still squally, and the party having been drinking somewhat freely, do not appear to have been so careful as they might have been; a gust of wind, it is said, overturned the boat, and all its occupants were drowned, with the exception of the boatman and the boy. A coroner's jury have acquitted the boatman of blame, though they expressed an opinion that the boat was overloaded.

THE QUEEN'S VISIT TO IRELAND.

(From the Home News, August 26.)

THE Queen and the Prince Consort, accompanied by the Princess Alice, the Prince Alfred, and the Princess Helena, left Osborne at a quarter before nine o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, the 21st of August, and, embarking on board the royal steam-yacht Fairy, crossed to the Clarence Victualling-yard, where the special train for the conveyance of the royal party to Holyhead was in waiting, under the charge of the officers of the London and South Western Railway Company. Punctually at a quarter to ten o'clock, the time appointed for its departure, the train set out on its journey. At a quarter before seven (five minutes before the appointed time) the train arrived at Holyhead, when the royal party at once walked from the railway carriage across the pier, alongside of which the Victoria and Albert was moored. In half-an hour the royal yacht, attended by the Osborne, was steaming out of the harbour, under a salute from the flag-ship Revenge and other vessels of war, and in less than four hours the royal party had entered the Bay of Dublin, and passed inside the piers of Kingstown harbour, beyond which a division of the Channel fleet lay moored with all their yards and ropes most beautifully illuminated. At that hour, however, the vessels of war did not, of course, salute. There were great crowds on all the piers of the harbour, who remained till past midnight—long after it was known that her Majesty would not disembark till the following day. In the same way all the avenues leading to Westland-row station in Dublin were equally thronged.

The morning of Thursday, the 22nd of August, proved an exception to the rule of what is expected on such occasions as "Queen's weather." It was not only not at all fine, but, on the contrary, in the last degree drizzly, damp, and uncomfortable. The thick mist could hardly be called rain, nor the cold breeze wind, yet they made up by perseverance for what they wanted in force. Whether it was due to this cause, or whether popular feeling had undergone a reaction from its high pitch during the night, it is hard to say, but there seemed a less lively enthusiasm now, when the Queen actually came, than was manifested the day before, when she was only expected. There was, however, a very numerous concourse at Kingstown; though not, perhaps, so great as was anticipated by the authorities, it was much greater than might have been expected on such a cheerless day. Blocks of seats were erected on the Carlisle Pier, and these were thronged, as is usual on such occasions, with ladies, and some of whom, as is also usual, claimed admittance to block B with A tickets, and took their seats in block C without any tickets at all. Every one, however, seemed very well satisfied with everything, for each seat commanded an excellent view of the landing place, and all of them were under cover. The Lord-Lieutenant came down from Dublin soon after ten o'clock. He was in plain clothes, as were also Lord Gough and the new Secretary for Ireland, Sir Robert Peel. With his lordship, also, were Lord Otho Fitzgerald, Sir Richard Griffith, Sir James Powell, Mr. Dargan, Lord St. Lawrance, &c. There was no lack, however, of a brilliant staff, all in full uniform, among whom the tall figure of Sir George Brown, the commander-in-chief, was at once conspicuous. "Soon after ten," says the special correspondent of the Times, "the royal yacht slipped from her moorings, and began a series of half turns ahead and astern, preparatory to coming alongside the pier. This, with a vessel of such size, took some time to accomplish, and from the moment it commenced till the evolution was completed and the Queen had landed, the fleet remained with yards manned. In this interval the royal barge was sent for his Excellency the Lord-Lieutenant, who at once went on board. As the vessel was hauling alongside the Queen was not on deck, but the Princess Alice remained sitting at the window of the quarter-deck saloon. With her was Prince Alfred, brown and ruddy-looking, and the young Princess Helena. Lord Granville, Lord Sidney, Lady Churchill, Colonel Sir Charles Phipps, K.C.B., and Major-General Grey remained near the gangway amidships. Just as the royal yacht was safe alongside the pier, her Majesty and the Prince Consort came on the quarter-deck. The Queen looked remarkably well, but was attired in the very deepest mourning, as, indeed, were all the other members of the royal family. As soon as the gangway was fixed, Mr. Chambers went on board to present an address from the corporation of Kingstown. This faint vestige of a formal ceremony scarcely occupied a minute in its despatch. Mr. Chambers bowed and presented an address, which the Queen accepted and bowed, and that was all. Sir George Brown was next sent for, and had a short audience of her Majesty, and after him Sir Robert Peel, with whom also the Queen spoke for a short while. By this time all the preparations for the landing were completed, and her Majesty, leaning on the Prince Consort's arm, passed down the gangway on to the pier. As she did so the guard of honour from the 2nd battalion of the 19th, under Captain M'Kinsley, presented arms, and the ships in the harbour slowly thundered forth a royal salute, while the best of all royal salutes, a tremendous cheer, was given by the people on the pier and on the heights around. Her Majesty seemed much pleased with the warmth of her reception, and was occupied continually in bowing her acknowledgments on all sides. Close to the landing-place the royal train was drawn up, with an exceedingly handsome state carriages, the same that was used on the occasion of the last royal visit in 1853. The royal party at once entered their carriage, and in another minute the train was on its way to Dublin. All the intermediate stations along the line were crowded with spectators, who cheered lustily, but vaguely, at each and all the carriages as they flew past, but as the pace was too quick to allow them to recognise anything or any one, their loyalty appeared most disinterested. At Westland-row station the royal carriages, with an escort of Hussars, were in waiting, and, notwithstanding that the rain was now falling quickly, all the carriages were open. In these her Majesty and the royal family and suite proceeded at a trot through the city to the Viceregal-lodge, which has been entirely given up to her Majesty during her stay. All along the route was crowded, though by no means so much as it would have been had the weather been less unfavourable. No flags, or banners, or decorative demonstrations of any kind were attempted, in compliance with what is universally understood to be the wish of her Majesty. The cortege passed along Westland-row, and thence by College-green and Westmoreland street, over Carlisle-bridge and along the quays, to the Phœnix-park. All along these roads the paths were fairly thronged—all the windows especially crowded, and a perfect ripple and flutter of handkerchiefs streamed from each. At the Viceregal lodge her Majesty was received by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, who had come up from the Curragh in the morning especially to meet her Majesty. The rest of the day proved as unfavourable as its commencement. Yet, later in the afternoon, her Majesty and the Prince Consort drove out for a short time, visiting Trinity College Library, the Kildare-street Club, and the Fine Arts Exhibition. Only the prince, however, was present at the latter. In the evening there was a banquet at the lodge, to which, among others, the Lord-Lieutenant, the Duke of Wellington, and Sir R. Peel were invited."

On Friday, August 23, the Prince Consort paid a preliminary visit of inspection to the camp at Curragh, and towards the close of the afternoon, after his return to Dublin, both the Queen and the Prince honoured the exhibition of the Royal Dublin Society with a long examination. There were great crowds along the streets through which the royal cortege passed, though the time for the visit was quite uncertain, any many had been waiting patiently a very long time. Everywhere en route her Majesty received the warmest demonstrations of respectful and affectionate loyalty. Apparently, however, the good citizens were not satisfied, and the great majority remained in their places till the Queen returned, which was not till near seven o'clock, when she was again received with the same cheers and acclamations. The Queen appeared in an open carriage.

On Saturday, the 24th, her Majesty visited the camp at Curragh. A sham fight took place, and occupied several hours; the manœuvres were on a most extensive scale. The royal cortege in its movements over the plain was followed by a vast crowd, who frequently cheered her Majesty. The weather was showery. The number of troops on the ground exceeded 15,000 men, and there was a vast concourse of spectators not only from Dublin but from Kilkenny, Carlow, and the surrounding country. The Queen returned to Dublin in the evening, and spent the following day (Sunday) in retirement.

OBITUARY.

THE BISHOP OF DURHAM.—On Friday, the 9th of August, at the castle, Bishop Auckland, aged 48, the hon. and Right Rev. Henry Montagu Villiers, Lord Bishop of Durham, eightieth occupant of that see, formerly rector of St. George's, Bloomsbury, and Canon of St. Paul's. The deceased prelate was the fifth son of the late hon. George Villiers, brother of the late Earl of Clarendon, by Theresa, only daughter of John, first Lord Boringdon, and sister of the late Earl of Morley, and was born in London, on the 4th of January, 1813. He was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated B.A., in 1834, but without taking any distinguished honours, and proceeded M.A. in 1837. Already, namely, in the year 1836, he had been ordained deacon by the Bishop of Chester (now Archbishop of Canterbury), his title for orders being the curacy of Deane, Lancashire; and, in 1837, he was admitted into priest's orders by the Right Rev. Dr. Carr, late Lord Bishop of Worcester. In the same year he was preferred by the then Lord Chancellor, to the Crown living of Kenilworth, which was formerly held by the father of the present Archbishop Sumner and of the Bishop of Winchester, as also by Dr. Samuel Butler, formerly Head Master of Shrewsbury School, and subsequently Bishop of Lichfield. In 1841, on the promotion of Dr. Thomas V. Short to the see of Sodor and Man, he was promoted by the then Administration to the metropolitan rectory of St. George's, Bloomsbury, the gross income of which is given in Crockford's "Clerical Directory" at £800 a-year. In 1847 he was nominated to a canonry in St. Paul's Cathedral, worth £1000 more; both of which pieces of preferment he continued to hold down to his elevation to the Episcopal Bench in 1856, when he succeeded the late Right Rev. Dr. Hugh Percy in the see of Carlisle. He was translated to the see of Durham only last year, on the elevation of Dr. Charles T. Longley to the archiepiscopal see of York, vacated by the death of the late Dr. Musgrave. As a hardworking, parochial clergyman, in one of the largest and most important London parishes, the name of Dr. Villiers will always be most widely known, and few more truly popular clergymen have ever filled a metropolitan pulpit than the hon. and Rev. Henry Montagu Villiers. He was admirable, also, in the management of his parish schools; the zeal with which he devoted his energies to the management of parish business was above all praise; and he compelled those who differed most widely from his religious opinions to admire his ability and administrative talents. If not learned or abstruse, he had at least the merit of being plain and practical; and he preferred his parochial work to the platform at Exeter Hall. He was the author of a few "Sermons" and "Lectures," including a work on "Confirmation," and also of a volume of "Family Prayers." As Bishop of Durham, he enjoyed the patronage of between seventy and eighty livings, and the income of his see was £8000 a-year. Dr. Villiers leaves one surviving sister, the Lady Theresa Lewis (wife of Sir George Cornewall Lewis, Bart., M.P.), and two brothers, the Earl of Clarendon, K.G., and the Right Hon. Charles Pelham Villiers, M.P. for Wolverhampton, and late Judge Advocate, one of the most eminent advocates of the repeal of the Corn Laws. The late bishop married in January, 1837, Amelia Maria, eldest daughter of William Hulton, Esq., of Hulton Park, Lancashire, by whom he has left surviving issue two sons and four daughters to lament his loss and their own. His eldest daughter is the wife of the Rev. Edward Cheese, Rector of Haughton-le-Skrine, about whose living there has been so much controversy raised of late in the public papers. It is not a little singular that the see of Durham should have fallen three times, within little more than five years, to the disposal of Lord Palmerston; firstly, in 1856, on the resignation of Dr. Maltby; again, last year, by the promotion of Dr. Longley; and now again, by the premature decease of Dr. Montagu Villiers, certainly not one of the oldest bishops on the bench.

LORD HERBERT OF LEA.—The serious indisposition from which Lord Herbert, late War Minister, had been suffering for some time terminated fatally on the 2nd of August at his patrimonial seat of Wilton, near Salisbury. When by the advice of his medical attendants Lord Herbert left this country for Spa some time ago, his state of health was such that very faint hopes were entertained of his recovery. The change of air unfortunately produced no improvement in his condition, and it was not considered desirable to oppose an earnestly expressed desire of his lordship to return at once to Wilton. Throughout his journey out and home Lord Herbert was attended by his wife. Lord Herbert was son of the late Earl of Pembroke, by his second wife—only daughter of Simon, Count Woronzow. He was consequently half-brother and heir presumptive of the present Earl of Pembroke. His lordship was born in 1810, and after having been educated at Harrow, proceeded to Oxford University, where he was in the fourth class in classics in 1831. He entered political life at an early age, and was appointed Secretary to the Admiralty in 1841, a position which he held uninterruptedly until 1845, when he assumed the then newly-created office of Secretary at War, in which his efficient performance of the duties devolving upon him demonstrated that ministerial ability which at once placed him in the front rank as a statesman. On a change of Ministry, in 1846, he vacated this office to be re-appointed under the premiership of the Earl of Aberdeen in 1852, when he was especially distinguished by his enlightened advocacy of an improved system of education amongst officers of the army, requiring them to undergo a course of examination as to their proficiency before obtaining promotion. The breaking out of the Crimean war prevented this system being carried out in its integrity; but when the administrative system of the British army broke down under that war the advantage of the course he had suggested became self-evident. After a brief tenure of office as Colonial Secretary in the latter part of 1855, Lord Herbert retired with the Aberdeen Administration, and during the four succeeding years passed in opposition his talents as a debater and statesman added greatly to his previous reputation. When Lord Palmerston reconstructed his Cabinet, in 1859, Lord Herbert was requested to assume the post of Secretary of State for War, the arduous duties of which he continued to discharge until his failing health obliged him to retire, when his services were honoured by his Sovereign with the well-won reward of a peerage. Lord Herbert was the possessor of a large landed property in Wiltshire and in Ireland, He married, in 1846, the daughter of Major-General Charles Ashe A'Court, C.B., by whom he leaves a young family of sons and daughters.

EARL OF TRAQUAIR.—On Friday, the 2nd of August, at Traquair House, co. Peebles, aged 80, the Right Hon. the Earl of Traquair. The deceased nobleman was Charles Stuart, only son of Charles, seventh and late Earl, and was born January 31st, 1781. He succeeded to the title on the death of his father, in October, 1827. He was the owner of large estates in Peeblesshire, where his family had been seated since 1492, when the barony of Traquair was conferred on them by the Scottish king, and confirmed by royal charter. The father of the original grantee was James Stuart, second son of Sir James Stuart, the Black Knight of Lorn, by Jean, Queen Dowager of King James I. of Scotland; the mother of the grantee was a daughter of the House of Murray, of Philiphaugh, and as he was not born in wedlock, he was obliged to obtain a charter of legitimacy. His great great-grandson was raised to the peerage as Lord Stuart, in 1628, and five years later was created Lord Linton and Earl of Traquair. This nobleman, according to Sir Bernard Burke, was constituted Lord Treasurer, Deputy of Scotland, by Charles I., and when that unfortunate prince was afterwards confined a prisoner in Carisbrooke Castle, he raised a regiment of horse for the king's service, but fell, together with his son, Lord Linton, into the hands of the rebels at Preston, and was committed to prison at Warwick Castle, where he remained for four years; when released from durance he returned home and died in poverty. The fourth earl of this line married a daughter of the Earl of Nithsdale, a title connected with one of the most romantic stories in the annals of the Scottish rebellion. As the late Earl was never married, the estate passes to his Lordship's sister, the Hon. Louisa Stuart, a lady very far advanced in years. The family of Traquair is one of the few ancient Scottish houses that have adhered without intermission to the Roman Catholic religion. The late Earl was, throughout life, a strong supporter of the Tory party in politics.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM.—The death of the Duke of Buckingham took place on July 29. His age was 64. Though buried in comparative obscurity for the last twenty years, and only known during that period as an author, the history of his splendid fortune and his desperate ruin is still remembered, and though since that ruin he took no part in politics, his political memory lives in the "Chandos clause of the Reform Bill." His Grace, Richard Plantagenet Temple Brydges Nugent Chandos Grenville, was Duke and Marquis of Buckingham and Chandos, Earl Temple, Viscount and Baron Cobham, and in the peerage of Ireland, Earl Nugent. He married in 1819 Lady Mary Campbell, sister of the present Marquis of Breadalbane, from whom he was afterwards divorced. By her he had two children, the Marquis of Chandos, who succeeds him in the title, and Lady Ann Gore Langhton.

ADMIRAL THE HON. SIR F. B. R. PELLEW.—We have to record the death of this gallant veteran, which occurred at Marseilles on Monday, July 29th, in his 70th year. The deceased was the second son of the first Viscount Exmouth by the second daughter of Mr. James Frowd. He was born in 1789. The deceased was twice married—in 1816 to the only daughter of the late Sir Godfrey Webster, who, however, died in 1849; and secondly, in 1851, to the daughter of the late Comte Edouard de Melfort, from whom he was divorced in 1855. He was appointed Naval Aide-de-Camp to the Queen in 1842.

ADMIRAL RYNOLDS.—We have to announce the death of Admiral Sir Barrington Reynolds, K.C.B., who expired on August 3rd, at Penair, his residence, near Truro. The gallant admiral was the son of Rear-Admiral Robert C. Reynolds, who was lost in the St. George, on returning home from the Baltic in December, 1811, and was born in 1785. The deceased officer performed, many years ago, important services in the East Indies and on the Syrian coast. From 1848 to 1852 he was commander-in-chief at the Cape of Good Hope and the Brazil station. It was during his command at that station that he obtained the thanks of the Government for his activity and zeal in suppressing the slave trade. Shortly after his return home, he was selected by the Admiralty, in May, 1857, for the post of commander-in-chief at Devonport, which appointment he filled up to October last. In 1838 he was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath, and in February, 1856, was made a Knight Commander of that most honourable order of knighthood.

VICE-ADMIRAL HERBERT.—We have to record the death of Vice-Admiral Sir Thomas Herbert, K.C.B., who expired on August 5th, at his residence, Cadogan-place, after a protracted illness. This distinguished officer was born at Cahirnane, in the county of Kerry, in 1793. His services in South America and especially in China are well known. Sir Thomas was rewarded with the title of Knight Commander of the Bath, in 1843. In January, 1847, he was appointed commodore on the south-east coast of America. From February until December, 1852, the Duke of Northumberland being then First Lord, he was one of the junior Lords of the Admiralty. He represented Dartmouth in the House of Commons from July, 1852, to April, 1857; but contested that borough unsuccessfully in 1859.

GENERAL FRANKLYN, C.B.—The death of General Franklyn, C.B., occurred on the 5th of August, in his 50th year. The deceased entered the army in 1823, and commanded the second brigade at the Alumbagh, in February and March, 1858, and subsequently the first division, and was present at the defeat of the enemy's attack. In March, 1858, when the position at the Alumbagh was attacked by the enemy in great force under the Moulvie, and which attack was successfully repulsed he commanded the first division of the army.

MADAME CATHERINE HAYES.—The death of this talented and popular vocalist took place on Sunday, August 11th, at Sydenham. On the previous Monday her medical attendant, Mr. Chappell, of George-street, Hanover-square, was requested by telegraph to attend her. From that time, in spite of medical treatment, she gradually became worse, and on Sunday morning she was speechless. At half-past six in the evening she expired, in the presence of her mother, and the friends at whose house she had been staying on a visit. Madame Hayes was about 40, and not in the least worn by her exciting profession. The effects of heated theatres had been blown away from her by the breezes of the Atlantic, Pacific, and Indian Oceans, and, accustomed to every climate of the world, she seemed the very last person for whose life one would have feared. Her great success as a vocalist is a matter of too much notoriety to need description. Even when matched against the great heroines of the Italian stage she was successful and for many years her position at the head of English concert singers has been impregnable. In Catherine Hayes Ireland has lost one of the sweetest singers of its national airs. A daughter of the sister isle, she was thoroughly imbued with the spirit of its melody, and it was in the alternately wild and tender melodies which have inspired so many poets that her genial warmth of expression found it highest medium for display. As a singer of this particular class of music she was probably unsurpassed. It was here, far more than in the Italian vocalisation of which she made herself an accomplished adept, that Catherine Hayes possessed the secret to charm the crowd. In her own country she had but to give a national air and hold the audience spell-bound. In private life the departed lady owned none but enthusiastic partisans; for no professor of the musical art ever reflected more social honour on her calling. Her career extended over some twenty years and upwards, during which she studied in Ireland under Signor Sapio, in France under Signor Manuel Garcia, and in Italy under Signor Filice Ranconi. Her public performances abroad were commenced, we believe, at Marseilles. From Marseilles she went to Milan; from Milan to Vienna; thence to Venice and other Italian towns. In 1849 she came to London with a first-class continental reputation; and few amateurs can have forgotten the flattering reception accorded to her when she appeared (with Mr. Sims Reeves) in "Linda di Chamouni" at the Royal Italian Opera. After two years in Great Britain, Catherine Hayes went to the United States, visited California, the Sandwich Islands, and subsequently Australia and India. In these distant regions the fame she had acquired in England was turned to profitable account, and, everywhere "triumphant," she realised a handsome fortune. On her return to England she sang at the concerts presided over by the late M. Jullien at her Majesty's Theatre; and since that period she has made tours in the provinces, especially in Ireland, where her way may be said, without exaggeration, to have been paved with gold and strewn with flowers. She was married in 1857 to Mr. Bushnell, who had undertaken the superintendence of her professional business in the New World. Her domestic happiness was, however, of very short duration, as she had for some years been a widow when she was herself called away.

W. H. CHRISTIE, Postmaster-General.

The Cornelius Howland was off Sydney Heads last night, and was spoken by the Rebecca. One of her seamen had fallen from aloft, and broken his arm and fractured his jaw. The Captain intended sending him on shore for medical treatment. The whaler has 1400 barrels on board.

The William Giffin, of New Bedford, was spoken on the 4th instant by the Rebecca, in latitude 21·56 S., longitude 156·56 E., with 1700 barrels oil. The Rebecca also reported having seen the Prince of Denmark schooner, of Sydney, at the Brampton Shoals on the 1st instant, with 600 barrels humpback oil on board.

The Yarra Yarra (s.), left Brisbane at 10 a.m., and Cape Moreton at 4·30 p.m. on Wednesday, arriving here at 11 o'clock last night. She had moderate northerly breezes and fine weather to Smoky Cape, and fresh variable winds the remainder of the passage. Passed the Don Juan going through the middle Channel, and Governor brig off Cape Moreton, from Brisbane to Sydney. On Friday, at 11·30 a.m., passed the Waratah off Black Head, and the New Moon (s.), off Seal Rock.

The Viceroy, from Melbourne, touched at Gabo Island, where she landed 28 passengers, and a quantity of Government stores.

RETURN OF THE REBECCA.

It will be in the recollection of our readers that about twelve months ago a report reached Sydney of the loss of the American whaler Superior at Treasury Island, where the crew were nearly all killed and the ship burnt by the natives. The Rebecca, then fitting out for the island trade, under the command of Captain Develin, received instructions from the American consul to proceed to the island and endeavour to rescue three of the Superior's crew, reported to be still alive in the hands of the natives, and most successfully has Captain Develin carried out his very difficult task. The Rebecca arrived at Treasury Island on the 20th March, and as is usual the natives gathered round the vessel, and the principal chief, named Copan, together with his son, came on board; but he had no sooner got into the cabin than Captain Develin secured him, and at once demanded the liberation of the seamen. The chief stated that two of the men had left the Island, having made their escape, by taking a canoe and reaching in safety a whaler that was on the coast, but that he would give up the other, sending word on shore for that purpose; and about noon, he came off in a whaleboat belonging to the Superior. His name is Powlin (a Portuguese), and he confirmed the chief's statement respecting the escape of his two companions. Several articles belonging to the unfortunate ship were also obtained by barter, and together with the boat have been brought on to Sydney. Previous to touching at Treasury Island, Captain Develin called off Strathan's Island, on the 29th March, where he learned from a native named Billy that three vessels and a cutter had been taken by the natives of Treasury Island; the cutter was doubtless the Iris supposed to have been lost at sea. The Rebecca was at Roubiana, on the 7th of March, where it was reported by a man named Mortimer, in the employ of Captain Develin, who resides on the island for the purpose of trade, that the day previous the second mate and boat's crew from an American whaler, supposed to be the L. Jane, had landed, at Hammond's Small Island, distant about 15 miles, for the purpose of obtaining some tobacco-leaf, large quantities of which grow there, and that on landing they were attacked by the natives, and all killed. Captain Develin, with some difficulty, obtained the boat, which he has also brought on to Sydney. Great praise is decidedly due to Captain Develin for the very able manner in which he has fulfilled his mission. It is well known that the natives of these islands never restore a white man to liberty unless some stratagem is used, but Captain Develin's thorough knowledge of the native character enables him to outwit the cunning of these savage tribes, and thus rescue an unfortunate fellow-creature from a fate worse than death.

The P. and O. Co.'s steamer Benares arrived yesterday, at 6 30 a.m., after an extraordinary quick passage from Point de Galle of only twenty-two days, being thus in advance of her contract time three days. Captain Purchase has on this trip eclipsed all former passages performed by the company's steamers since on this line, and we have to acknowledge his politeness in furnishing us with late papers. We are also indebted to the purser, Mr. Baylis, for our regular files and despatches. The Benares left Galle on the 19th September, and reached King George's Sound on the 3rd instant; strong S.E. trades being experienced for the first part, and fresh W. and S.W. winds the latter part of the run; she left the Sound on the 4th and arrived at Melbourne on the 8th, variable N.E. and N.W. winds prevailing. From Port Phillip Heads to Sydney the run was made in forty-six and a half hours. A fearful westerly gale was encountered after rounding Cape Lewen, accompanied with a terrific sea, which broke completely over the steamer's quarter and deluged the decks. No damage, however, was done, the vessel behaving admirably. An unfortunate accident occurred on board as the steamer was entering these heads, resulting in the death of one of the crew. The man (a Lascar) was holding on the end of a tackle fall that had been taken to the steam winch on deck, when, from some cause or other unknown, he fell with his head on the barrel of the winch, which was immediately caught in the rope and the skull completely smashed. Death must have been instantaneous.

The Jason, Captain Stuart, which arrived yesterday, sailed from Gravesend June 29th and landed the pilot at the Start July 3rd. On July 4th, when 40· west of the Lizard, a heavy gale carried away the foretopmast and jibboom, which compelled her to put back to Falmouth to repair damages. She sailed again July 10th; experienced light and contrary winds to the Equator, which was crossed August 9th, thirty days from Falmouth. Between 24· south and 30· south latitude, she was eight days becalmed, making in that time only 370 miles. Passed the meridian of the Cape of Good Hope September 6th, in latitude 44· south. Since that time she has had much bad weather. From the 20th to the 27th September, had a continuance of heavy gales from the S.W., which compelled Captain Stuart to run to the N.E. for four days as far south as latitude 35·40. On September 25th, in latitude 35·56 S., longitude 99·6 E. encountered a severe hurricane commencing at N., and shifting suddenly to W.N.W., when it blew with terrific violence, blowing the maintopsail, close reefed, to ribbons. Captain Stuart states he never experienced the wind to blow so hard before,—no canvas could stand it for many minutes, but fortunately its greatest violence only lasted about six hours, although a strong gale continued for two days after. During the bad weather had many sails split, and a great portion of the bulwarks carried away. October 9th, made Cape Otway, eighty-eight days out. Since then she has had light winds all the way to this port, making the passage ninety-three days.

The Urara (s.), from Clarence River, crossed the bar at 3 p.m. She had strong S.W. winds and fine weather during the passage. Her cargo consists of 629 bags maize, 47 hides, 106 barrels beef, 5 coops poultry, 9 cases eggs, 400 staves, 83 ozs. gold.

EMIGRATION.

The ship Wansfell, Captain Jones, sailed from Gravesend on Sunday, July 28, for Queensland, with 229 passengers on board. The Government emigration officer, Mr. Foster, under the direction of Captain Lean, inspected the ship, and ascertained that the accommodation and provisions were in accordance with the liberal requirements of the Act, to secure the safety and comfort of the passengers. Mr. Jordan, the emigration commissioner, addressed the passengers, giving them much useful information as to the best means of insuring success in the land of their adoption, and many useful hints for the voyage.

The clipper ship Venus, belonging to the Mersey line, sailed on the 31st July for Melbourne, having, in addition to a full and valuable cargo and her complement of passengers, the thoroughbred horse Athos and other stock, under charge of Mr. Bloxidge, a well-known dealer.

The Queen of India, the succeeding packet of the same line, takes out eight fine young two-year-old horses, purchased at the Leeds Agricultural Show, two having taken first and second prizes. One—Champion—is a pure-bred Suffolk, standing upwards of sixteen hands high, and weighing 15 cwt. They are taken out by Messrs. Jakeman and Perry.

The Blackwall, W. Harrison, belonging to Messrs. Green, of Blackwall, sailed from Plymouth July 26, for Adelaide.

The Murray, J. Lowe, commander, belonging to Messrs Jam e Thompson and Co., sailed for Adelaide on July 26th.

The Southampton, B. Tomkin, commander, one of Messrs. Wigram's Melbourne packets, sailed for Melbourne July 31st.

The Government emigrant vessel Persia, of 1084 tons, Captain John H. Smith, belonging to Mr. George Seymour, of London, sailed from Plymouth on the 6th of August, for Port Curtis and Moreton Bay, Queensland, with 68 married couples, 122 single men, 104 single women, 40 boys between the ages of 1 and 12, 35 girls between the same ages, 9 male and 8 female infants, making a total of 454 souls, equal to 399½ statute adults, under the charge of surgeon-superintendent Clarence Chapman, assisted by the services of James Ross, schoolmaster, and Maria A. Godbehere, matron.

The number of ships despatched by the Emigration Commissioners to the Australian colonies from 1847 to 1860 inclusive, was 831; the number of souls who embarked in these vessels amounted to 266,099; the number of deaths that occurred on the voyage was about 5006, or 1.88 per cent.; the maximum contract price for the conveyance of these emigrants was £25 16s. 4d., per statute adult, the minimum contract price £9 0s. 5d., and the average, £15 8s. 1d. The commissioners despatched 41 ships to the Cape of Good Hope; 10,608 souls embarked; 142 deaths occurred on the voyage, or 1·35 per cent.; the maximum contract price was £14 9s. 5d., the minimum £6 17s. 3d., the average £11 4s. 11d. Mr. Joseph Newman and family returned to the colony by this ship after a stay of about four years in England.

Messrs. Willis, Gann, and Co. also despatched the Albermarle, A 1 for 12 years, 1000 tons burden, on August 12th, for Wellington, with a few passengers and a full and valuable cargo of merchandise.

The delay in the passage of the Marco Polo was caused by the vessel having, on the 4th March, in the South Pacific Ocean, come into contact with an iceberg. The ship's bowsprit was knocked out, her bows were greatly damaged, and the foremast sprung, besides other damage which the ship received. Such was the nature of the damage sustained that all hopes of saving the vessel were at one time given up, but owing to the cool intrepidity of the captain and the brave conduct of all on board, the Marco Polo was taken into Valparaiso on the 2nd of April. After undergoing a thorough overhaul, she sailed for Liverpool towards the end of May, with all the passengers and gold. Notwithstanding that the voyage extended over about 173 days, the health of all on board was excellent, and the passengers are high in their praise of the conduct of the captain, officers, and crew.—Home News.

Joseph and Mr. David Cohen, of London. Mr. Lang, formerly a director and chairman of the company, was also present. The vessel's dimensions are as follows:—Length on waterline, 209 feet; breadth, 25 feet 3 inches; depth, 13 feet. This steamer has been designed for a high speed, from plans of Mr. John Dudgeon, of London, being the fifth ship he has designed for the same company, built in this country, and sailed out to Australia. The builders of the Morpeth guarantee a speed of fourteen knots, and from the fine lines of the ship, and her appearance when fairly afloat, we do not think the builders are too sanguine in their expectations. The engines are being manufactured by Messrs. Robert Morrison and Co., Ouseburn Engine Works. They are oscillating cylinders, of 53 inches diameter each, and a collective power of 200 horses. It is expected that all will be ready for an official trial trip in the course of a month, after which we will give a more detailed description of this ship, which, in many respects, is much superior to anything that has yet gone from the Tyne. The height betwixt cabin decks is nine feet.—Steam Shipping Chronicle, August 16th.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1861.

In the Council yesterday,

Mr. Robertson, in reply to Mr. Gordon, stated that it was the intention of the Government to introduce, during the present session, a Bill for the re-construction of the Legislative Council on an Elective basis; and that the bill would be introduced into the Council first.

The House went into committee on the Crown Lands Occupation Bill.

The several clauses were gone through, some discussion taking place on the 3rd and other clauses, which had previously been debated.

Finally, the bill was reported with verbal amendments at a few minutes after seven o'clock.

The House, on resuming business, went into committe upon the Crown Lands Alienation Bill.

Mr. Robertson moved the re-committal of the bill for the purpose of restoring words to the second clause, which had been expunged, before the ruling of the President that the Crown Lands Alienation Bill was a money bill—namely, "during the currency of such lease."

After a lengthened discussion, the words were restored, on division, by a majority of twelve to six.

The report was finally brought up as amended, and the adoption of the report on this bill also, made an order of the day for Wednesday next.

The Tomago Coal Mining Company's Bill was gone into in committee, and passed and reported.

The House adjourned to Wednesday next.

The Legislative Assembly met yesterday at twenty-nine minutes past three p.m.

Dr. Lang presented himself and was sworn in.

Mr. Piddington presented a petition from inhabitants of Morpeth, Maitland, Hinton, and other localities, praying careful consideration of the Maitland and Morpeth Railway Bill by the House. The petition was ruled irregular by the Speaker, as not concluding with a prayer.

Mr. Buchanan, by way of personal explanation, in regard to certain statements of his on a late occasion, which had been disbelieved, was about to read a letter, when he was stopped by the Speaker. Some interchange of remonstrance and altercation took place between the Speaker and the hon. member.

In answer to Mr. Dickson, Mr. Arnold said a telegraphic apparatus would be provided for East Maitland station, whenever the money placed for the purpose on the Estimates should be voted by the House.

Mr. Buchanan again asked leave to read a letter in defence of his character for veracity.

The Speaker ruled that no discussion on the late debate could be permitted. If the letter involved no reference to this, it might be read.

Mr. Buchanan then read a letter from one Mr. W. P. Moffat, who professed to have been solicitor for the parties tried at Goulburn before Mr. Justice Wise, for participation in the riots at Burrangong. Mr. Moffat bore testimony to the substantial accuracy of Mr. Buchanan's statements. The hon. member then gave notice of a motion for an address to the Crown to remove Mr. Justice Wise.

In answer to Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Cowper said an application for Petty Sessions at Ryde had been referred to the Parramatta Bench, in order to ascertain how much police business was dealt with from the neighbourhood of Ryde, and that, as it appeared to be small in amount, the application in question had been refused.

Mr. Burns was informed by Mr. Cowper that a sum had been placed on the Estimates for a lockup at Lochinvar.

In answer to Mr. Holroyd's question, upon whose recommendation certain gentlemen had been, and why, and upon whose recommendation others, who had resigned at the same time, had not been re-appointed magistrates, Mr. Cowper said the Government had made the appointments on their own responsibility without suggestion from any one.

Mr. Holroyd gave notice of a motion for correspondence on the subject.

In answer to Mr. Burns, Mr. Cowper said the proclamation of the road between Maitland and Buchanan had been delayed for a report upon the cost of fencing. The report had been just received, and the road would be proclaimed at once.

In answer to Mr. Terry, Mr. Cowper said the first report of Mr. Surveyor Coombs in reference to the road from Mudgee to Wellington, had not been satisfactory, that a second was expected, until the receipt of which no decision could be arrived at.

In answer to Mr. Driver, Mr. Cowper said all claims of Chinese for compensation had been referred to a commissioner, who had not yet reported.

Mr. Terry was informed by Mr. Cowper that the question of alignment of the streets of Mudgee yet rested with the municipal authorities.

In answer to Mr. Watt, Mr. Arnold said a sum had been placed on the Estimates for a telegraph from Bathurst to the Southern telegraph line by Burrangong. It was impossible to say whether it would pass through Carcoar or Cowra—that to class the road from Bathurst to Cowra as a main road would require an alteration of the law—and that a plan was before the Government for a road from Cowra to Lambing Flat.

Mr. Arnold furnished Mr. Dangar with a number of voluminous details as to the names, the number, the salaries, and the occupations of the superintendents and overseers on the several roads of the colony.

In reply to Mr. Dangar, Mr. Cowper said that the offices of clerk of petty sessions and police magistrate had been united in ten instances, by way of experiment, which it was not proposed to extend, as it had not been satisfactory.

Mr. Holroyd presented a petition from certain citizens of Sydney in favour of removing restrictions from colonial wine.

Mr. Cowper laid on the table copies of the commissions of the District Judges, which were ordered to be printed.

The Speaker announced the receipt of letters from certain hon. members excusing their non-attendance upon the call of the House.

Excuses were offered for the absence of others.

The names of hon. members were called over by the clerk.

Mr. Wilson moved the second reading of the Church and School Lands Bill. It was the bill of last session. The hon. member gave a brief history of the case, showing that the original corporation was formed by royal charter in 1826, for purposes of religion and education, according to the tenets of the Church of England, with power to revoke, in which case the lands were to revert to the Crown for such purposes as it might direct. The lands had so reverted, and had since passed to the Legislature of the colony by the Constitution Act, besides which the original grant had been pronounced invalid by some authorities. There were legal opinions both for and against the position, that these lands are Crown lands. These doubts would be removed by the bill.

Mr. Cowper maintained that the lands were held by the colony subject to a trust for general purposes of religion and education. In the course of the hon. member's speech, a warm altercation arose between himself and Mr. Wilson, whose statements Mr. Cowper repeatedly characterised as untrue, and "false," for which expression he was called to order by the Speaker. The expression, however, was not withdrawn or apologised for, Mr. Wilson intimating his belief that Mr. Cowper had stated what he knew to be untrue, and the latter asserting that Mr. Wilson would not dare to say what he had said elsewhere.

Mr. Redman said that the lands were held in trust by the Government as a splendid donation for the youth of the colony. He mistrusted the House, and had no faith in its stability. The preamble of the bill recited a falsehood.

Mr. Forster regarded the question as one of policy. The lands had been resumed by the Crown, and the rights of the Crown passed to the Legislature of the colony, not to the House. They had the legal right, and there was no moral wrong in merging the administration of these lands into the general management. The trust, if any was general, and part of their general duties. Ministers were responsible to the House, and to create a complication of estates would only weaken that responsibility.

Mr. Sadleir dwelt on the unsatisfactory operation of a similar system in Canada. He would support the bill, but thought the funds should be appropriated for education.

Mr. Moriarty would vote for the bill, with an additional clause to protect contracts.

Mr. Dickson maintained that the entire right of the Crown in these lands had passed to the colony. He would open them for free selection.

Mr. Dalgleish, Mr. Gray, and Mr. Holt spoke in favour of the bill.

Dr. Lang had always held opinions unfavourable to the corporative system, of which Mr. Cowper was so warm an advocate. As the lawyers had given opinions on both sides, the House might very well dismiss them, and use its common sense. As a matter of policy, he would cordially support the bill.

The second reading passed without division, and consideration in committee was fixed for that day week.

Mr. Egan, Mr. Walker, and Mr. Moriarty apologised for their absence in the earlier part of the evening.

Messages were ordered to be sent to the Legislative Council, asking the attendance of members as witnesses on select committees.

Mr. T. Garrett and Mr. Haworth were ordered to attend on October 25th.

On the motion of Mr. Daniel, returns relative to leases in the pastoral districts were ordered.

On the motion of Mr. Gray, two petitions recently presented by himself from Wollongong and Kiama respectively, were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Driver moved for a sum of £500 to be placed on the Estimates, for an ornamental fence in the Domain. The hon. member asked for this sum to encourage the noble game of cricket.

Mr. Weekes saw no objection.

Mr. Gray, Mr. Egan, and Mr. Dalgleish opposed the motion.

Mr. Walker pointed out that the motion had no reference to cricket.

Mr. Allen would not tax his constituents for purposes of amusement.

Mr. Leary suggested the withdrawal of the motion.

A conversation ensued, Mr. Driver offering to accede to the suggestion, but Mr. Dickson objected.

Mr. Piddington protested against the motion, as likely to infringe upon the "sacred character" of the Domain, and as a misappropriation of public funds. He could not understand the Colonial Treasurer assenting, in the present state of our finances.

Mr. Redman would jealously guard the Domain from the intrusion of cricket, or any other "noble game."

Mr. Driver, having replied, the motion was negatived by 32 to 7.

Messages came from the Legislative Council, granting the attendance of members to give evidence before select committees.

Mr. Sadleir postponed his motion relative to the "District Trust Bill."

Petitions lately presented by Mr. Holroyd and Mr. Dalgleish were ordered to be printed.

Mr. Dalgleish withdrew a motion relative to prizes for the Volunteers.

On the motion of Mr. Holroyd, papers relative to the railway at Parramatta were ordered.

Petitions lately presented by Mr. Alexander and Mr. Morrice were ordered to be printed.

Leave was given to Mr. Forster to introduce a bill to extend the powers of the Pyrmont Bridge Company.

On the motion of Mr. Burns, papers were ordered relative to the accounts of the Maitland Road Trust, and others relating to the railway embankment at Wallis Creek.

The House adjourned to the usual hour on Tuesday next, at nineteen minutes to eleven p.m.

If we were inclined to take a side in the American war on commercial or political considerations, these feelings would be entirely subdued by a recollection that this war is fratricidal, and that its issue must be the desolation of one of the noblest regions of the world. Calm spectators who have no passions interested in the issue of the conflict, and who set a high value upon human life, and especially upon Anglo-Saxon life, cannot survey the conflict of these our brethren without the deepest pain. Our sympathies naturally waver with the alternate aspects of the war.

When the blow falls heavily upon the Southerns, we remember that they are connected with our commerce, and that they are to a large extent our own countrymen. When the North flees in battle, and its safety seems imperilled, the sympathy naturally changes, for the issue is equally deplorable. The triumph of either would probably be injurious to both, and pernicious to the world. The language of their orators and writers on both sides indicates a spirit so fierce, and breathes revenge so sanguinary, that we have reason to fear the conflict will form no exception to the history of civil war, as it has been exhibited in most countries. It is highly probable that there will be no battles of a very sanguinary or decisive nature, but alternate successes and defeats.

Never since the laver of revolution desolated France under the Convention, have belligerent parties applied to each other such terms of hatred, or denounced such retaliation. There are already examples of wanton cruelty and reprisals of the most exasperating nature. Ignoring all the antecedents of this war, the journals for the North persist in treating the Southern armies and Government as rebels, and threatening them with the penalties of rebellion. Where an insurgent force rises to attack a Government, in the midst of a population generally attached to its authority—an authority clear and indisputable,—then armed opposition may be accounted rebellion; but where States, comprehending territories larger than European empires, act under their own regular authorities, and interpret, in a particular form, their sovereign rights, it seems to be not only absurd, but atrocious, to stigmatise their organisations as rebellious, or to treat them otherwise than as a belligerent power, to be subdued perhaps, but still to be respected. The scholar will recall the indignant reproach of Cicero, when, after the triumph of Cæsar, some parasite and flatterer charged those who had met Cæsar in arms with crime. The orator distinguishes the position and circumstances of the belligerents when yet fortune was unpronounced, and when men of all ranks and functions in the Roman empire sided according to their own convictions or sympathies with those who disputed the dominion of the Roman world.

These exaggerated claims on behalf of the United States as against an immense section of the territory, and a compact and united mass of the population, throw a shadow on the North and its cause, and alienate all who stand in the attitude of spectators, and who wish to see peace, but not the ascendancy of exasperated factions. The same great orator to whom we have alluded, when complimenting Cæsar on the benignity of his administration, points out how much the Roman people were indebted to him for his own personal clemency, compared with the vindictive adherents to his standard, who wished not only for victory, but for vengeance.

There are some calamities resulting from war which are inevitable to its prosecution. We may regret when houses are demolished, orchards rooted up, corn fields trodden down, the industrial achievements of the population effaced and destroyed—but, having granted the necessity for war, these are its inevitable attendants. But nothing can excuse a civilised people in entering upon such a conflict in the spirit of ruffians—and in applying language to each other entirely inconsistent with their former relations and the position to which they aspire in the civilised world. In ordinary times, words are but wind. Their influence, at any rate, cannot be appreciated. They may prepare the minds of the people long beforehand for some disastrous development of national character. But in the midst of civil strife the fury of the orator or of the Press is converted into an order, an inspiration, and hence those shameful crimes which have already disfigured the civil war of America. How marvellous are the variations of national feeling within the course of a few years! The echoes have hardly died away of those eulogies which the Americans pronounced on their Government—its strength, its impartiality, its comprehensiveness, its elastic power, its purity, its intelligence, its freedom. To read, however, the descriptions which the Americans give of each other you would imagine that in the North you have nothing but hypocrisy, and corruption, and covetousness—love of money, and contempt for truth; and in the South, that the whole population are but a disorganised mass, stimulated by the darkest passions, and leagued for the destruction of civilisation. And yet on both sides the people are precisely what they were in their state of quiescence. Their elementary character is unchanged, and the only difference to be found is, namely—that then, we had the principles, or spring time; and now, we have the summer and the crop.

A consideration of the facts will only confirm the conclusion at which we so long arrived—that whatever material strength may reside in the North, the end for which it is combating is not worth the labour which its achievement will require; and that the welfare of the world would be best promoted by the separation in fact of those States which are already separated in interest and affection. The imputation of cowardice to the soldiers on either side of this conflict which have appeared in their respective organs will not weigh with any who are accustomed to look closely into military affairs. Napoleon himself was accustomed to say that the most courageous troops are liable to a panic. A new force must be particularly exposed to those agitations. There can be no great confidence in any military authorities. The soldiers have not yet tried each other. They have, too, this great disadvantage—that the spirit of citizenship has followed them to the camp, and that the absolute submission and confidence necessary to the success of an army are not yet established. This can only be attained by a more perfect organisation, and by a protracted war. But it is probable that a war, so carried on and continued, would be fatal to the constitution and liberties of America. And, then, what would follow? Constitutional Monarchy?

PARRAMATTA.

Friday, 5.30 p.m.

The Bazaar in aid of the Volunteer Band opened this morning, on the same site as that lately occupied by the Wesleyan bazaar. The weather was beautifully fine, and, as the day advanced, the number of visitors increased. The Volunteer Band was in attendance. The bazaar will remain open throughout the evening.

NEWCASTLE.

Friday, 9.50 a.m.

The strike at the Minmi Colliery has terminated—Messrs. Brown and the miners having compromised the matter. Tools were taken down yesterday, and work will be commenced this morning. Messrs. Brown have contracted to load the ships Marcianus and Nagasaki at once.

Our Parliamentary Report, Notes of the Week, and Queensland Correspondence, stand over till Monday next, in consequence of the press of European and American news by the mail.

Rev. Joseph Beazley.—Not a few of our readers are aware of the prolonged and severe affliction of the Rev. James Sherman, of Blackheath. That most excellent minister, for a considerable time past, has been in very feeble health; indeed, it began to be impaired before his resignation of the pastorate of Surrey Chapel; but within the last twelve months it became seriously worse. He, therefore, obtained a lengthened leave of absence, under medical recommendation, and went abroad, but without any satisfactory results. He, therefore, returned; a few weeks back, indeed, it was apprehended that his days were numbered, and his work done; one and another, his deacons and dearest friends, who visited him, departed with the painful conviction that they should see his face no more. It has notwithstanding pleased the great Preserver of men to grant a respite; the final results are a matter of utter uncertainty. Time alone can reveal the Divine purpose. Under these circumstances, the Rev. Joseph Beazley, late of Sydney, was engaged to supply the pulpit; and this he has done with great acceptance for a period of eight months. As there is no probability of Mr. Sherman ever being able to resume the sole charge—if, indeed, even to engage in the smallest departments of pastoral duty—it has been deemed expedient at once to reinforce the pastorate. Mr. Beazley was accordingly unanimously and earnestly requested last Friday night to accept the co-pastorate; and this, we rejoice to say, he has done. This event will be an unspeakable solace to the great and loving heart of Mr. Sherman, and import new life into the church and congregation he was honoured to collect in that pleasant locality. We congratulate both Mr. Sherman and his flock, as well as the people of Blackheath generally, upon this arrangement. Mr. Beazley is a true man, thoroughly tried and well seasoned for labour. In Sydney, New South Wales, he was viewed as a pillar, a man alike effective in the pulpit and on the platform, and greatly beloved by every section of the Church of Christ. He is a valuable acquisition to the ranks of religion in this great metropolis.—British Standard, August 9th.

Accident from Fire.—Yesterday afternoon a child named Agnes Jane Mooney, aged two years, sustained very severe injuries by her clothes accidentally igniting while standing near the fire in her father's house at Camperdown. The deceased and her sister, some eight years older, were the only persons in the house at the time of the accident—their mother being dead (having died in the Infirmary from tetanus, supervening on the fracture of one of her legs, about nine months ago), and their father, a woodman, being away, engaged in his usual occupation. The unfortunate child was conveyed in the course of the evening to the Sydney Infirmary, where the parts of her body, injured by the fire were carefully dressed.

LAW.

SUPREME COURT.—THURSDAY.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.

BEFORE the full Court.

FITCH V. THE VICTORIA FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Mr. Martin, Q.C., resumed his application for a rule nisi, calling upon plaintiff to show cause why there should not be a new trial on twelve grounds. The action was one upon a policy of insurance against fire of stock-in-trade at West Maitland, to recover the amount of such insurance, upon the ground that goods to a larger amount had been destroyed. The main ground of the defence had been that the stock in plaintiff's shop was very much less than had been represented, but there was also an issue as to whether plaintiff had complied with his contract to render an account, in detail, of his loss, &c., as soon as possible after the fire. The jury had found for the plaintiff in every particular, and for the full amount claimed. By the present motion the finding was impeached in many respects as against both law and evidence. One ground of objection, however, (and upon which a rule was granted,) went to the impartiality of the jury who tried the case. It appeared that the action had been carried on by means of a subscription from Fitch's creditors, who had no chance of payment unless Fitch recovered his insurance money. One of these creditors—Mr. Dangar—assisted in striking the jury, and he left on the panel a gentleman who was his own book-keeper, and, as such, well acquainted with and interested in all the questions which were in dispute here. The father of this book-keeper was also left upon the panel, and both jurymen were relatives of Mr. Dangar. Another ground upon which a rule was granted was as to plaintiff having failed to render a detailed account of the goods lost, &c., within a reasonable time after the fire. The whole of the evidence was elaborately gone over in order to show that plaintiff's account of his stock-on-hand was untrue. Except as to one point, their Honors regarded this case as one of conflicting evidence, in which there was no ground for interference with the verdict of the jury. The single exception was as to the quantity of boots and shoes in stock at the time of the fire. Plaintiff had to show a loss of over £300 worth, and had given evidence to that effect, but he stated at the same time that he had but about ten trunks. His shopman stated that there were about twelve, while a third witness for the plaintiff fixed the number at six or eight. There was evidence, however, that the average value per trunk was but £20 so that even if there were twelve trunks and all quite full—an improbable thing in a small provincial shop—the amount would fall short of the required sum. Upon this ground a rule was also granted to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside as against evidence.

FRIDAY.

SITTINGS IN BANCO.

Before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Wise.

LLOYD V. WENTWORTH.

This was an application for leave to amend pleas, in an action for libel, which had been demurred to. The libel declared upon was a newspaper paragraph averred to have been inserted, at the instance of defendant, which stated that defendant had filed a bill in Equity against plaintiff, formerly his superintendent, for fraud in the sale of a moiety of certain stations at Liverpool Plains, and for an account, &c., and that he (defendant) was confident of success in this suit. Defendant had pleaded the general issue, and that the statements in the alleged libel were true in substance and in fact. This having been demurred to, it was now proposed on the part of the defendant to amend, by setting out the entire bill in Equity. The main contest here was whether the defendant ought or ought not to be compelled to place upon the record an averment that there had been in fact, fraud on the part of the plaintiff. This was resisted upon the ground that no fraud had been, in fact, alleged or meant to be alleged in the paragraph declared upon as libellous, only that a bill charging fraud and seeking an account had been filed, and that defendant was sanguine of success in the suit.

After considerable argument it was arranged to amend the pleadings in this way. Defendant to pay the costs of the amendment, and the validity of the new pleas to be argued when the case as it at present stood on the paper on demurrer should be called on.

Mr. Darvall, Q.C., and Mr. Isaacs, appeared in support of the application; and Sir William Manning, Q.C., and Mr. Martin, Q.C., and Mr. Meymott, shewed cause against it.

INSOLVENCY APPEALS.

Before the full Court.

IN RE GEORGE AUGUSTUS FREDERICK LENTZ.

In this case the present Chief Commissioner had refused to grant a certificate, upon the ground that Lentz had been four times insolvent.

The insolvent appeared in person to sustain his appeal. He showed that two of his previous insolvencies—in 1852 and 1855—had been occasioned by a large advance of wages at a time when he had building contracts on hands. His last insolvency had been occasioned by his being defeated in an action wherein he was plaintiff, and in which he had had every reasonable prospect of success.

Their Honors, after looking at the affidavits, and taking into consideration the nature of the action alluded to, were all of opinion that this case was one in which the certificate ought to be granted.

IN RE WILLIAM M'ILLHATTON.

This was an appeal against a refusal of insolvent's certificate upon the ground of his having given an unjust preference to a creditor. There had been no opposing creditor, and the certificate had been refused by the Chief Commissioner, ex mere motu, on consideration of the evidence. After the Chief Commissioner had expressed his opinion upon the evidence, but before he had pronounced his decision, insolvent, through his attorney, tendered his own further evidence.

Mr. Windeyer appeared in support of the appeal.

Their Honors held that it was the right and duty of the Commissioner to enquire and act even when there were no opposing creditors, and as the evidence stood, his decision appeared to be right also. But when insolvent's further testimony was tendered it ought to have been taken. The case was therefore adjourned until the 1st of November, with permission to insolvent to be examined in the interim, and to examine other witnesses, if he had any.

IN RE HUGH MAXWELL.

This was an appeal against the allowance of a certificate by the late Chief Commissioner.

Mr. Milford appeared in support of the appeal, and Sir William Manning, Q.C., and Mr. Isaacs for the insolvent.

A number of grounds were taken, but in the first instance argument was taken upon a single objection which went to the whole question as to whether the certificate had not been prematurely granted. This was, first, that the Chief Commissioner had improperly refused to receive certain further evidence in reference to some of the objections then before him; secondly, that he had refused to allow certain new objections to be based upon the evidence as taken.

Their Honors were of opinion that it was quite within the discretion of the Chief Commissioner to refuse the admission of any new objections, and in this case he had exercised that discretion wisely. Upon the new points sought to be taken, those of insolvent having concealed a watch and chain, and having made erasures and alterations in books, there was not the slightest prima facie case. On the other point, however, the case was different. Before determining the question at issue—whether insolvent had set up a frivolous defence to an action—all the evidence which was tendered or tenderable ought to have been heard. The case must therefore be adjourned until 1st November, for the reception of this evidence. It was intimated that if the opposing creditor failed, he would most probably have to pay all costs both of the present motion and of taking the evidence.

IN INSOLVENCY.

Before Mr. Justice Milford.

CERTIFICATES.

The Chief Commissioner reported that he had granted certificates to Colin Mackenzie, Michael Benson, and James Fraser Poole. Also, to William Traill M'Kaughan subject to the insolvent's fulfilment of his contract with his creditors. He also reported the suspension of Edward Johnson's certificate for six months, for having taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act twice within three years, viz., on the 1st February, 1859, and the 2nd April, 1860.

PLANS OF DISTRIBUTION IN ARREAR.

The Chief Commissioner laid before the Court a list of all estates six months or more under sequestration, in which no plan of distribution had been filed, or further time given for that purpose.

COMPULSORY SEQUESTRATION.

The rule nisi for compulsory sequestration in the case of M'Cabe v. Roberts, was made absolute on the motion of Mr. Milford.

ESTATE OF HENRY WILLIAM DUDLEY.

Mr. Stephen moved for and obtained an order, in the usual terms, for the release of the above estate from sequestration, the whole of the creditors named in insolvent's schedule having given their written consent thereto.

IN RE HENRY JAMES BYRNES.

Mr. Butler applied for and obtained a certificate under the provisions of the Act 10 Victoria, No. 14, over two years having elapsed since the certificate of this insolvent had been refused. The order to lie in the office of the Chief Commissioner for the usual period, and to be advertised twice in the daily papers.

ESTATE OF JAMES RICHARD FRYER.

Upon the motion of Mr. Milford a rule nisi in this estate, granted on the 29th September last, calling upon the creditors to contribute ratably to reimburse the official assignee for certain expenses which he had incurred—was made absolute.

IN CHAMBERS.

Before the same.

SIRKETT V. THE MUNICIPALITY OF REDFERN.

This was an application upon notice (on behalf of the defendants) to have the cause removed for trial from the Metropolitan District Court to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Faucett appeared in support of the motion, and Mr. Stephen opposed it.

The plaintiff was the owner of certain houses at Redfern, and his cause of action was that the Municipal Council, in raising the street, had cast the water upon plaintiff's property, and greatly depreciated its value. The grounds of the present application were that many important questions of law were involved, some of which, as there might be many actions of this nature, might affect the very existence of the municipality. The plaintiff stated on affidavit that he could not afford the expense which would be entailed by a suit in the Supreme Court, and that he had been advised, and believed there were no other points in his case but what had been involved in the suit of Cattin against the same Municipal Council, which had been tried in the District Court.

His Honor made the order applied for, upon the ground that as many other actions might be brought against this Corporation, the decision might be of great importance. A condition was attached, however, that if defendants should succeed, they should only claim of plaintiff such costs as he would have been liable to if the action had been tried in the District Court.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE A. Cheeke, Esq., Judge.

MACKINTOSH V. BIRD.

This was an action for an assault committed by defendant upon the plaintiff in August last. It appeared that plaintiff called at the stores of defendant, when some altercation took place between them; defendant charging plaintiff with injuring him in his business, which the latter denied. The charge was several times reiterated, and plaintiff eventually called defendant a liar. Defendant then pushed plaintiff out of his office and struck him a blow with his fist, bruising his cheek, and giving him a black eye. Verdict for plaintiff, £5. Mr. R. Johnson for plaintiff, and Mr. S. C. Brown for defendant.

HOSKING V. JOHNSON.

Plaintiff claimed £11 13s. 1d., balance upon a promissory note. Defendant claimed a set-off for music supplied, for repairing and storing a jeu de flute. For the plaintiff, it was contended that the instrument was not in good order when it was taken home by the plaintiff, and that the repairing had not been performed in a satisfactory manner. Verdict for plaintiff, £3 9s. 7d. Mr. Banbury for plaintiff, Mr. Richard Johnson for defendant.

M'DIARMID V. RICHARDSON.

Plaintiff claimed £100 for injuries sustained, and for medical expenses incurred by him, in consequence of the defendant's horse and dogcart running over his children. It appeared that in February last, defendant went to the quarters of the Mounted Patrol, and left his horse and dogcart near a fence, in the barrack yard, remaining at a short distance from the horse's head. Two horses were driven across the yard, and passing defendant's horse caused it to bolt—the wheels of the dogcart passing over plaintiff's children, breaking the fore arm of one and severely bruising the other child. The medical expenses amounted to £31 10s.; but it was admitted by Dr. M'Phee that he attended both lads at the same time, but had charged for double visits. Dr. Foucart proved that the charges were higher than what were usually charged. Verdict for plaintiff, £29 8s. Mr. Butler, instructed by Mr. Cory, for plaintiff; Mr. Hellyer for defendant.

APPLETON V. A. S. N. COMPANY.

Plaintiff claimed damages from defendants for that by reason of their negligence certain machinery, forming portion of "Appleton's stone-breaking machine," which had been placed on board the Rangatira to be conveyed from Sandridge to Sydney, was broken and destroyed. The evidence of the first and second officers, and also that of the boatswain of the Rangatira, had been taken by the defendants de bene esse, which evidence was put in by the plaintiff as a part of his case, from which it appeared that twenty packages were placed on board, the largest weighing about 36 cwt. That in order to raise this out of the vessel's hold, a hawser was used which, in the opinion of the witnesses, was calculated to sustain a weight of three tons. That this rope was used in preference to a chain, or to one of much smaller dimensions with which the packages were lowered into the hold. That when the machinery was lifted about four feet the hawser broke; that there was no appearance of decay about it, and that every care and precaution had been taken. Plaintiff nonsuited. Mr. Butler, instructed by Mr. Cory, for plaintiff; Mr. Johnson for defendant.

BUSINESS OF THE COURT.—Mr. Hellyer enquired of the Judge in what position would those cases be which might remain untried at the time of the proclamation taking effect, altering and enlarging the district? His Honor said the difficulty had been foreseen and provided for. In all those cases parties would be entitled to have their plaints entered free of charge, on leaving fresh copies at the office; such cases to take precedence of new ones.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Police Magistrate, with Messrs Cooper, Rountree, M. M. Cohen, Oatley, Asher, Cullen, and Ross.

Nine drunkards were fined 10s. each (with the usual alternative), and two obstinate offenders were sent two months to Darlinghurst.

Charles Brown, alias Louis Hamer, was brought before the Bench charged with having, on the 25th October, 1858, at Sydney, uttered as true a forged cheque, purporting to be signed by Frederick Croft, with intent to defraud Frederick A. Muller. Prosecutor deposed that in the month of October, 1858, he kept the Hamburgh Hotel, King-street, and the prisoner lodged in the house; after bank hours on the day named prisoner brought him a cheque (produced) for £15, purporting to be drawn on the English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank by Frederick Croft, and asked him to oblige him with cash for it; he said it was drawn by lawyer Croft; declined to cash it, but, knowing Mr. Croft, lent prisoner 30s., taking the cheque as security; on presentation payment was refused, and on inquiry of Mr. Croft himself the cheque was repudiated; took out a warrant for prisoner's apprehension, but did not see him again until now in Court. Mr. Dickson, for the Chartered Bank, deposed that no person named Frederick Croft had an account in that establishment in October 1858; and Mr. Croft, solicitor, deposed that the signature is not his. The prisoner was apprehended in Sydney by detective Scarlett, in consequence of his correspondence with a description of Louis Hamer published in the "Crime Report;" he said that his name is not Hamer, but Brown. Committed for trial. Bail refused.

A Chinaman, Dib Ha, was, on Sunday last, apprehended by constable Connor, in the bush, about a mile from the Bark Huts, Liverpool Road, charged with having on the previous Tuesday broken into and robbed the dwelling of Sid, another Chinaman; in his "swag" found some articles of wearing apparel, an opium pipe, some opium, tea, sugar and rice, a razor, a pair of scissors, and 7s. 6d. in silver; in reply to the charge he said only, "Don't let my countryman kill me." Sid deposed that on Tuesday last week he left home, previously locking the door and putting the key in his pocket; returning, he found that the door had been broken open, and a variety of goods, with 7s. 6d. in silver, taken away; those produced by the constable are part; two vests and an opium pipe, produced by another Chinaman, who deposed that he received them from the prisoner, are his property. The prisoner was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

James Austin was on Monday last brought before the Bench by sergeant Camphin, who deposed that on Saturday he received information, in consequence of which he in the evening went to Adrain's auction room, in King-street; saw prisoner there, and followed him thence to Barnett and Lister's auction room, to two or three shops in Pitt-street, and to a house in Prince-street; as he was about to enter, asked him a question, in reply to which he said that he occupied a part of the house; witness then told him that he was a policeman, and to be careful how he answered the questions put to him; in reply to questions prisoner said that he had not that day, nor that week, taken any goods to Adrain's room for sale by auction; he said nothing except in reply to questions. [Mr. Ross said that such conversation was highly irregular and improper—that he was surprised that the sergeant did not know his duty better—and that he could not sit and hear such evidence.]—Took him then to the lock-up, and, having obtained assistance, accompanied prisoner back to his house; on searching which found boxes, parcels, and bundles, containing merino, twill, regatta, and dress shirts, drill moleskin, and tweed trousers, ladies' drawers and nightdresses, pieces of silk handkerchiefs, sundry other handkerchiefs, five remnants of merino, pieces of barege, calico, fringe, net, towelling, gloves, socks, eau de cologne, twelve pair of stays; and from Mr. Adrain received some merino, twill, and regatta shirts, some trousers, and some silk handkerchiefs; prisoner was not present; all these are produced. [The Bench inquired of the officer what Adrain said when he gave up the goods, in reply to which the sergeant reminded their worships that prisoner was not present.] Prisoner was then remanded until to-day, when Charles Adrain deposed that he had known prisoner since the 24th ultimo, on which day, and on several times since, Friday evening being the last time, he brought goods, slops, and drapery to be sold by auction; he gave his name as Claridge; of the goods he brought on Friday, some silk handkerchiefs were sold on Saturday evening; the rest he gave to sergeant Camphin, and one now before the court. Charles E. Morris, salesman to Messrs. Brierley, Dean, and Co., deposed that prisoner has been for some years in their employ as storeman; had not missed any goods from the store until, on hearing the circumstance of prisoner's apprehension, he compared the stock with the sales since last stock-taking, and missed goods similar to these, but to a larger extent; he could swear to the boxes by the marks, but not to the contents; had no doubt whatever that all the goods, worth about £40, belong to Messrs. Brierley, Dean, and Co.; but will only positively swear to a few, either by the marks upon them, or by the fact that just so much or so many are required to make up the deficiency, such as 7 pair of fancy drill trousers, 12 pair stays, a piece of silk tabinet, a piece of American rubber, a piece of huckaback, and one other pair of trousers, the value of which is about £4. Other evidence was given, the object of which was to show that the prisoner had opportunity of helping himself to goods in the store, and that only he could have taken these. Committed for trial. Bail refused. Mr. Cory conducted the prosecution, and Mr. W. Roberts attended on behalf of prisoner.

Sarah Johnson was summarily convicted of having stolen two razors and two brushes from a hairdresser's shop on Brickfield-hill, and, being an old offender, was sentenced to be imprisoned four months.

Niel Johnston was convicted of having in his possession two books which had been stolen from the library of W. S. Creeny, of Bathurst-street, schoolmaster, and was sentenced to be imprisoned three calendar months. He denied the stealing, but said that he was sent by a man named Robertson to pawn them for him. It appeared, however, that he took the books to Davis' pawn-office in George-street, and said that they belonged to himself; Mr. Davis did not believe his statement and gave him into custody. The police made enquiries, and found the owner: they had been used at morning prayers yesterday, and would not have been missed until this morning.

Mary Connolly, found guilty of having wilfully broken six squares of glass, was ordered to pay 8s. 6d., the damage, or to be imprisoned forty-eight hours; and Mary Ann Jardine, for disorderly conduct in Pitt-street at ten o'clock this morning, was sentenced to pay a penalty of 20s., or to be imprisoned three days.

On the summons sheet were about a dozen cases. Three defendants were fined 5s. each, and one 10s., for violation of the Police Act; one was fined 10s. and another 20s. for trivial assaults; one case was postponed, and the rest were dismissed for want of prosecution.

WATER POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE Mr. Ronald and Mr. Eldred.

T. L. Hagemeister, found guilty of disorderly conduct on board the Dutch ship Fop Smit, was sentenced to a fine of 20s., or to be imprisoned for forty-eight hours.

Three drunkards, found guilty of that offence, were sentenced respectively to pay a fine of 10s., or to undergo twenty-four hours of solitary confinement.

F. C. Miran was summoned to answer the complaint of Mary Ann Williams, which stated that she had hired with defendant as nursemaid and general servant at 4s. per week, that she left his employ in July last, when eight weeks' wages were due to her, and that this amount, though repeatedly promised to be paid, had not been settled. The bench ordered payment of £1 12s., the sum claimed, or, in default of payment, defendant to be imprisoned for seven days.

TERMINATION OF THE STRIKE AT MINMI.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

NEWCASTLE, October 11.—For the last two days it has been currently rumoured that the Minmi miners intended to commence work on Thursday. However, nothing definite could be ascertained until last evening, when all doubts as to the termination of the strike were set at rest. It appears, after some slight negotiation between Messrs. J. and A. Brown and the miners, a little was given way on both sides, the matter was compromised, and the result was, the tools were taken down the pits yesterday, and work will be commenced this morning. So enthusiastic were the parties, that several of the more prominent procured a chair, and having decorated it with ribbons, flowers, &c., "chaired" Mr. J. Brown round the pits. A cask of ale was furnished by the owners, and a general rejoicing took place. The utmost good feeling prevailed between both parties, which is highly gratifying. The news has been received with infinite pleasure by every one.

Messrs. J. and A. Brown have contracted to load the ships Marcianus and Nagasaki, and we may shortly expect to see our harbour once again studded with every description of sail. It is fully expected the other companies will shortly come to terms. Mr. Winship and Mr. Berner proceeded to Sydney yesterday. It is earnestly hoped they may bring back the welcome intelligence of the entire termination of all disagreements, so that work may be commenced at all the mines at once.

PARRAMATTA.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

FIRE.—Between the hours of twelve and one of Thursday morning another fire broke out at the rear of the premises of Mr. Cox, the Great Western Hotel. The fire broke out in the stable at the back of the premises, which, containing a quantity of hay and straw, blazed most furiously. On the evening previous the stable was full, but, fortunately, no horses were placed in the stables on Wednesday night. Some of the members of the fire brigade with engine were with all possible expedition on the spot, and played upon the fire for some considerable time, principally with the object of preventing the flames from reaching buildings adjoining and the hotel itself. Several other persons also gave active assistance. The alarms of fire since the arrival of the engine have been numerous, and persons are beginning to be convinced of the necessity for such a thing in the town. It would be well, also, if people could be convinced of the desirability of insuring their properties against risk by fire. The proportion of properties insured in Parramatta is very small, and so much the less is the support which the volunteer company can expect to receive from the insurance companies. But what can be said of those who neither insure their premises nor give one penny towards the support of a fire brigade. To the prevalence of such a spirit as this is to be attributed the non-success of public institutions in this town, which are maintained with difficulty by the labour and at the expense of a few, who look for public assistance and co-operation in vain. So far the volunteer fire brigade has, with some exceptions of this nature, I believe, succeeded in receiving a fair share of support; but much is yet needed, to which Mr. Williams, in his remarks on the occasion of the arrival of the engine, drew attention. A good fire-bell, properly hung, is highly necessary; ladders and buckets yet have to be provided, in order to procure which the company look for assistance from the proprietors of property in the town, whose interests they are striving to protect.

MR. KELLY, P.M., DENILIQUIN.—From the Southern Courier of the 4th instant we learn that this gentleman has been seriously ailing for several days, having suffered a violent attack of rheumatic fever; which had incapacitated him from attending to his magisterial duties. A private note of the 5th has been shown to us, in which the writer states that "there are no symptoms of any improvement."

EQUITY PRACTICE.—We have been requested to draw the attention of the profession to the following order:—LVI of 3rd April, 1858.—"That where the party actually prosecuting a decree or order does not proceed before the Master with due diligence, then the Master shall be at liberty, upon the application of any other party interested either as a party to the suit or as one who has come in and established his claim before the Master under the decree or order, to commit to him the prosecution of the said decree or order, and from thenceforth neither the party making default nor his solicitor shall be at liberty to attend the Master as the prosecutor of the said decree or order."

THE ADELAIDE MAIL SERVICE.—As announced in a telegram from Adelaide in our issue of yesterday, the A. S. N. Company have obtained the contract for the branch service between Adelaide and King George's Sound, for a subsidy of £1600 a month. The vessels engaged in the service will make intermediate trips between Adelaide and Sydney, thereby not interfering with the trade between Melbourne and Adelaide. The contract will be entered upon at once, a steamer starting from Adelaide on the 27th instant, to meet the Salsette at King George's Sound.

SYDNEY LIGHT HORSE.—A deputation of the Sydney Light Horse, now amounting to fifty sabres, waited on the Colonial Secretary to request him to hasten the proclamation of the corps as the troops are now ready to commence drill, having that excellent drill sergeant, Barton, of the XIth Hussars, waiting to commence operations. Similar cavalry corps are now completed at Richmond, Penrith, and elsewhere, and the Light Horse, or Australian Hussars, promises well to be the favourite arm of the mounted volunteers. The Colonial Secretary replied that his absence at Windsor had delayed the proclamation, but Colonel Kempt would soon have properly organised all the new corps, which by the end of the month would be most probably proclaimed officially.—Communicated.

NEW FURNITURE POLISH.—We have been favoured by Mr. W. J. Baker with a sample of new furniture polish, manufactured from a receipt of his own, and compounded after numerous trials and considerable experience. Mr. Baker, in detailing the advantages which his polish possesses over others now in use, says "that it is easily applied, is free from odour or grease, produces a beautiful lustre, is perfectly cleanly, and will not allow dust to adhere to the articles on which it is used." From the trial we have given to the sample sent to us, both in our office as well as in our household, we are able to endorse all the statements he has made, and can confidently recommend it to such of our housekeeping readers as may desire to have their furniture in first-rate order, without the inconvenience attendant upon the greasy deposit left by many of the furniture polishes commonly in use.

BOURKE-STREET.—The Corporation have of late been engaged in the formation of a street from Woolloomooloo to its junction with Bourke-street, Surry Hills. The street, which is a very useful and convenient one, is one also that has involved very considerable labour, as the quarry to the north side of Burton-street had to be filled up. Alongside the Darlinghurst watch-house, however, there is a deep cutting from the path that used to be followed. Many who are not aware of the formation of the street take this old road in the dark, and we have heard of several severe accidents in consequence. A slight temporary fence along the edge of the cutting, which is not of many yards in length, would prevent the occurrence of accidents which must be dangerous, and might be fatal. The street itself is one of the greatest boons the Corporation has yet conferred on Woolloomooloo and Darlinghurst.

ACCIDENT.—Yesterday afternoon one of the seamen of the schooner Elizabeth, whose name we could not ascertain, fell down the hold of that vessel and sustained a severe cut thereby on his head. The wound which was very deep, was dressed by a medical man, and he was afterwards admitted into the Infirmary.

PITT-STREET TRAMWAY.—The trams for this way are now laid down nearly from King-street to Bridge-street, while a considerable amount of work has been done at the southern part of the street. The excavations that have had to be made, and the soil and metal thrown up on either side of the line, occupy double the space which will be required for the line when perfect. There has, however, even under these circumstances, been little interruption to carriage traffic, and when these extraneous obstructions are removed, we believe there will be none, and that the prejudices against street tramways will soon vanish.

VOLUNTEER ARTILLERY.—The usual monthly parade of the 2nd battery takes place in the Inner Domain, this afternoon. We are pleased to learn that this battery, by the united exertions of its members, is fast increasing its strength, and we trust soon to see the volunteer artillery number several hundreds in its ranks. The existing batteries on our harbour requiring at least 1000 men.

THE PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS, AUGUST 6.

SHORTLY after two o'clock, the Commons were summoned to the bar to hear the Royal assent given to several bills, and to hear her Majesty's Speech, proroguing Parliament, delivered by the Royal Commissioners appointed for that purpose.

The Royal Speech was read by the Lord Chancellor:—

My Lords and Gentlemen,—

We are commanded by her Majesty to release you from further attendance in Parliament, and at the same time to convey to you her Majesty's acknowledgments for the zeal and assiduity with which you have applied yourselves to the performance of your duties during the session of Parliament now brought to a close.

Her Majesty commands us to inform you that her relations with foreign Powers are friendly and satisfactory, and her Majesty trusts that there is no danger of any disturbance of the peace of Europe.

The progress of events in Italy has led to the union of the greater part of that peninsula in one monarchy under King Victor Emmanuel. Her Majesty has throughout abstained from any active interference in the transactions which have led to this result, and her earnest wish as to these affairs is that they may be settled in the manner best suited to the welfare and happiness of the Italian people.

The dissensions which arose some months ago in the United States of North America have, unfortunately, assumed the character of open war. Her Majesty, deeply lamenting this calamitous result, has determined, in common with the other Powers of Europe, to preserve a strict neutrality between the contending parties.

Her Majesty commands us to inform you that the measures adopted for the restoration of order and tranquility in Syria, in virtue of conventions between her Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, the Emperor of the French, the King of Prussia, the Emperor of Russia, and the Sultan, having accomplished their purpose, the European troops which, in pursuance of those conventions, were for a time stationed in Syria to co-operate with the troops and authorities of the Sultan have been withdrawn; and her Majesty trusts that the arrangements which have been made for the administration of the districts which had been disturbed will henceforward secure their internal tranquility.

Her Majesty has seen with satisfaction the rapid improvement in the internal condition of her East Indian territories, and the progress which has been made towards equalising the revenue and expenditure of that part of her territory.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,

Her Majesty commands us to convey to you her warm acknowledgments for the liberal supplies which you have granted for the service of the present year; and her Majesty has seen with satisfaction that, after amply providing for the wants of the public service, you have been able to make a sensible diminution in the taxes levied upon her people.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Her Majesty commands us to express to you the deep gratification with which she has witnessed the spirit of devoted patriotism which continues to animate her volunteer forces; and the admiration with which she has observed their rapid progress in discipline and military efficiency.

Her Majesty has given her cordial assent to the Act for completing the number of the members of the House of Commons by allotting the forfeited seats of Sudbury and St. Albans.

Her Majesty trusts that the Act for improving the laws relating to bankruptcy and insolvency will be productive of important advantages to the trade and commerce of her subjects.

Her Majesty has given her ready assent to acts for consolidating and assimilating the criminal law of England and Ireland, and for promoting the revision of the statute law.

Her Majesty has given her assent to important Acts which she trusts will have the effect of opening more largely employment in the public service to the European and native inhabitants of India, of improving the means of legislation, of furthering the ends of justice, and of promoting the contentment and well-being of all classes of her Majesty's Indian subjects.

Her Majesty has assented with pleasure to the Act for the improvement of harbours on the coast of the United Kingdom and for relieving merchant shipping from passing tolls, and also to the Act for improving the administration of the law relating to the relief and the removal of the poor.

Her Majesty trusts that the Act for rendering more easy arrangements connected with the drainage of land will assist agricultural improvements in many parts of the United Kingdom.

Her Majesty has gladly given her assent to many other measures of public usefulness, the results of your labours during the session now brought to its close.

Her Majesty has observed, with heartfelt satisfaction, the spirit of loyalty, of order, and of obedience to the law, which prevails throughout all her dominions, and she trusts that by wise legislation, and a just administration of the law, the continuance of this happy state of things will be secured.

On returning to your respective counties you will still have important public duties to perform; and her Majesty fervently prays that the blessing of Almighty God may attend your exertions, and may guide them to the attainment of the objects of her Majesty's constant solicitude—the welfare and happiness of her people.

The commission of prorogation having been read by the clerk at the table,

The Lord Chancellor, in her Majesty's name, formally declared Parliament to stand prorogued to Tuesday, the 22nd of October next.

The Speaker and the Commons then retired to their own Chamber, and the Lords Commissioners and the other peers present immediately afterwards dispersed.

MR. PARKES AT BIRMINGHAM.

ON Wednesday evening an address on "The advantages of New South Wales as a field for British emigration," was delivered in the Music Hall, Broad-street, before a very large audience, by Mr. Henry Parkes, one of the Commissioners appointed by the Colonial Government, and ex-member of the Legislative Assembly for the city of Sydney. The chair was taken by Alderman Baldwin. Mr. Parkes having given a brief sketch of the early history of the colony, from the time of its settlement seventy-three years ago, stated that it had a coast line of 500 miles in extent, an area considerably in excess of 207,000,000 acres, and a population of between 400,000 and 500,000. A large amount of land in the interior was held by squatters, or, as they might more fitly be termed, pastoral tenants of the Crown, and it has been to the interest of those gentlemen, who, though few in number, had all the influence derived from great wealth, to create an impression that the land was unfit for anything better than pastoral occupation. This, however, was not the case, as a very large proportion of the land was capable of bearing all the cereals of Europe, all the fruits of Europe, except currants and gooseberries, and most of the intertropical fruits and vegetable products. The climate, which was rather warm occasionally, might be best described by saying that it had one perpetual summer. The first discoveries of gold had been made in New South Wales, and though the sister colony of Victoria had carried off the palm of gold-producing reputation, the average yield of gold per man engaged at the "diggings" was greater in New South Wales, this probably being accounted for by the more settled habits of the goldsearchers. In addition to this, New South Wales was the only one of the Australian colonies that possessed an apparently inexhaustible coal field, the colony having for years exported coal to various parts of Australia, to China, and to India. It possessed two or three productive mines of copper, now in work, and iron mines, which would be worked so soon as the difficulty of carriage to the sea coast had been overcome. With regard to the educational capabilities of the colony, it had a University that had been built at a cost of £100,000, with professors who were high Oxford scholars, and having the power of granting degrees that were recognised at Oxford and Cambridge; a Church of England and a Roman Catholic College, a Wesleyan College being in course of erection; an excellent Grammar School, with first-class masters; National Schools, both on Lord Stanley's and on the denominational system; many good private schools; and 313 Sunday schools, with 16,930 scholars. As to religion, he would only say that they were as religious as the people of England, and built as many churches, but they had a strong feeling against allowing Government money to go to support the Church. After alluding to the low tariff and to the three trunk lines of railway now being opened into the west, south, and north interior, and explaining the system of government adopted by the colony, Mr. Parkes explained the provisions of the new Land Bill, now before the Legislature, and sure to pass this year, by which a man might go and choose for himself from 40 to 320 acres of the best and richest land in the colony—the only exception being land within ten miles of a city with 10,000 inhabitants, within five miles of a city of 5000 inhabitants, or within two miles of a township. If the land was not surveyed he could "peg" it out himself, and he had only to pay a deposit of 5s. per acre at the Land Office, and then no one could disturb him. The price of land would be 20s. per acre, and if at the end of three years he could not pay the 15s. Government would give him an extended credit, for ever if he liked, on his paying interest at the rate of 5 per cent. He would also have the privilege of grazing over three times as much of the uncultivated Crown land as the extent of his own freehold. In conclusion he urged upon those persons intending to emigrate the manifold advantages of the great colony of New South Wales, and stated that the Commissioners had established an office at 10, West Strand, London, where any communications forwarded asking for information concerning the colony would receive immediate and careful attention.—The proceedings were brought to a close by votes of thanks to Mr. Parkes and to the chairman, on the motion of Mr. George Edmonds, seconded by Councillor Maher.—Birmingham Daily Post, August 23.

BREAKS.—The practice of driving breaks with untrained horses through the most crowded streets of the city is most mischievous and dangerous. True it is that but little danger can accrue to the driver, but the horses in other vehicles may be startled, to say nothing of the danger to passengers from the rampant rate at which they are driven. We saw one start from opposite the Union Bank yesterday afternoon. One of the horses had evidently not been in harness before. It neither trotted nor galloped, but jumped along at a furious pace. The driver—no doubt a very skilful one—urged the animals along with lash and shout, precisely as stockkeepers do in bringing in a mob of cattle. Horses must be trained to run in harness even through the city, but their elementary education should not take place in the most crowded streets.

THE AUSTRALIAN ELEVEN.—At the Queen's Hotel, Manchester, the other evening, a dinner was given to the cricketers engaged in the above match by Mr. Mallam, the agent of Messrs. Spiers and Pond, of Australia, who has lately arrived in England with full powers to make arrangements for taking to that colony eleven or twelve of our best cricketers to play twelve matches over there. Mr. Mallam presided at the board, and Mr. Burrup (hon. secretary of the Surrey club) occupied the vice-chair. The chairman's proposals were listened to with much attention, and were to this effect, that each man's expenses, out and home, should be defrayed, and for his services £150 should be given. G. Parr, not agreeing with the proposals, declined to go out. Mr. Burrup stated that no doubt if terms were agreed on the following would go, namely:—H. H. Stephenson, Caffyn, Griffith, Cæsar, Mortlock, Sewell (all Surrey men), Wells (who starts this week), and E. Stephenson. A short time is left to others to consider of it.—Home News, August 26.

FATAL BOAT ACCIDENT.—On the afternoon of Thursday last a fatal boat accident occurred at Botany Bay, by the upsetting of a wood boat. Two men, named Hugh Campbell and Joseph Sutchliff, were sailing across Botany Bay, intending to go up George's River for wood, when a sudden squall came on and capsized the boat, which immediately sank. Campbell could swim a little, and consequently managed to keep on the surface till he was picked up soon afterwards by a waterman named Curtiss; but Sutchliff, being unable to swim, sank and was drowned. Several parties were out all day yesterday dragging for the body, but they returned in the evening unsuccessful. Sutchliff was an unmarried man, and about forty seven years of age.

THE NEWCASTLE COLLIERIES.—TERMINATION OF THE STRIKE.—It having been known by telegraph that conditions had been agreed to between Messrs. Brown and their employes, and that operations at the Minmi collieries had been resumed, a meeting was held yesterday of gentlemen representing the Australian Agricultural, the Newcastle Coal and Copper, and the Wallsend Coal Companies, and who, after some deliberation, authorised Mr. Hannell, M.L.A., the Mayor of Newcastle, to telegraph to the four gentlemen who had been appointed to mediate between the proprietors and the miners to inform the latter that the former had agreed to abide by the terms, whatever they were, that had been made at the Minmi colliery. It is probable, therefore, that these terms will be accepted by the body of miners, and that the strike being at an end the Newcastle miners will forthwith commence working as usual.

NO. 2 COMPANY VOLUNTEER RIFLES.—At a meeting of the above held last night at the Volunteer Club, Captain Windeyer in the chair, it was agreed that members shall meet for drill every morning and afternoon until dismissed drill, to commence from Monday next, at 6.30 a.m. It was also agreed that honorary members be accepted on payment of an annual fee of two guineas, after which a committee was formed for the purpose of collecting subscriptions to present to Sergeant Strong a testimonial, in recognition of his valuable services and attention to the company. The meeting separated after giving three cheers for the Queen, and three cheers for the Captain.

LAMBING FLAT.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.]

OCTOBER 7TH.—Although our population has been very unsettled lately, the returns of gold from this place still continues large, the escort to-day taking 3351 ounces 18 dwts. 11 grs., and £365. The accounts received from the Lachlan during the last few days are very favourable, but from the depth of sinking and the necessity of slabbing the shafts, men proceeding there will require some little capital. The gold is very rough, from 1 to 15 dwt. nuggets. I have seen several samples of it, and certainly am of opinion its value is not equal to the Lambing Flat gold. I was given to understand that it was all water-worn gold, but the samples I have seen are the reverse of this, it being angular, honey-combed, and to all appearance as if it had not travelled far from its source. From its appearance, I should be led to think that quartz reefs must abound in the locality of this gold. Numbers are still leaving this place to try their fortunes at the Lachlan, but it will require some few weeks further testing before its auriferous character can be fully decided.

The miners on these fields who have payable claims are working steadily, but there is a great disposition on their part, on working their claims out, to be led away with reports of extravagant finds on some other fields and leave, although every day shows more plainly than ever that there is a very great extent of payable ground yet to be worked in this district. For however small a rush may take place, in no one instance has any one turned out a failure; a fair proportion of payable claims always being found. The workings on the main creek extend every day; on the banks of it, near the township, ground deserted for months is now being taken up. One party of twenty men, in very wet ground, after thirteen weeks' work day and night, have at a depth of eighty feet succeeded in striking payable gold. The shaft requires slabbing, and will be rather expensive sinking. But the great attraction to these fields is the great extent of alluvial ground that can be worked with little or no expense. To-day on the Bathurst road, about four miles from the township, and only about one mile from the late rush in that direction, a shaft was bottomed at a depth of nine feet, and two pennyweights to the dish obtained, and as a matter of course a rush to the ground; the only fault (if it can be called such) at present with respect to these fields is that there is such an extent of auriferous ground, that wherever any person may sink the chances are that payable gold is found, that rushes are taking place daily, and much ground deserted that would otherwise be worked. We require a very much larger working population than we have at present, and there is plenty of payable ground for them all.

The Chinese at Back Creek are doing but little; the ground getting worked out, and not being allowed to work at any other place their numbers are diminishing. Some two or three hundred of them attempted to work a portion of ground at the Upper Wombat, but were obliged to leave it. Many, during the last fortnight, have left this district. Stoney Creek may be said to be quite deserted.

Mr. W. D. Campbell, who was appointed by the Government to inquire into the Chinese claims for compensation for losses sustained at the late riots, has been here for some time so engaged. Whatever report this gentleman may make, I feel fully assured that it will be anything but satisfactory to all parties. That a very considerable amount of property was destroyed belonging to the Chinese, at the roll-ups that have taken place, no one can doubt. At the riot of the 30th June, as I then stated, I believe there was £10,000 worth of property destroyed; but from what I have heard with respect to the claims now made upon the Government this does not represent a sixth part of the amount. The money, gold, and opium said to have been lost upon these occasions is perfectly absurd, for no class of diggers, in the best of times, could have been so universally successful as to have been in the possession of the amounts of money these Chinese have claimed; many of them, I believe, have made fair and legitimate claims; many have also placed their claims into the hands of several parties, and, I expect, it will yet be found that many claims are in duplicate or triplicate; many have claimed four or five times their actual losses, in the hopes of getting a fair proportion awarded them; while, I believe, that many have sent in large claims who were never present at any of the riots, or lost a single sixpence. But the great difficulty will be to arrive at who really were the losers—who ought to be compensated—and to what extent. Should Mr. Campbell be enabled to decide so knotty a subject he will greatly astonish me, for if it were possible to arrive at the actual loss, I feel it would be quite impossible so to award it that the actual losers should be the only receivers of the compensation. I have, upon all occasions, ever been ready to advocate that the Chinese should receive justice, and be compensated for the losses they have sustained; but the course they are now pursuing, or being advised to pursue, in making the claims they have upon the Government is, I consider, as great an injustice attempted to be palmed upon the country, and as indefensible as the rolls-up that have taken place against the Chinese on these fields; and I am much disposed to think that when Mr. Campbell's report is sent to the Government it will convince them of the almost utter impossibility of appropriating any compensation that might even be voted for them.

I have just received information of a disturbance between the Chinese and Europeans at Back Creek. It appears that the Chinese discovered some payable ground last week; the Europeans getting to know of it on Saturday, determined to drive the Chinese out of it, to-day when the Chinese commenced to work they were driven off. Information was forwarded to the camp, when Mr. Commissioner Lynch and Assistant Superintendent M'Lerie with some police proceeded at once to the spot, and upon enquiry, found that the Chinese were outside their boundary, and ordered them to leave the ground.

CHINA.

OUR dates from Hongkong are to the 28th of August.

The Overland China Mail of that date supplies us with the following summary of news:—

In the early part of the month there had been an attack upon the residence of the British Ambassador at Yeddo. It took place at two in the morning, at which hour the various members of Legation were suddenly aroused from their slumbers by a band of ruffians, who, there is some reason to think, were suborned by some of the powerful opposition nobles who lately retired from power upon the "foreign" question. The only casualties, however, that are reported, consist of one wound in the head received by Mr. Morrison, and a more severe wound in the left arm received by Mr. Oliphant. The Japanese guard fought bravely, and saved the entire Embassy. Mr. Harris and the other Ambassadors were unmolested. Our Minister immediately called upon H.M.S. Ringdove, to supply him with a guard, and preparations were being made for the worst. The Governor of Yeddo has informed Mr. Alcock that he cannot guarantee his safety unless he takes shelter within the citadel.

This attack has been followed by a succession of daily alarms in the shape of reports to the effect that the attack was about to be renewed, and it has become only too evident that the dignity and security of the English Minister at Yeddo is being made a plaything of by the people of Japan.

Among other information as to the probable motives which prompted the onslaught, a document has been published giving the names of fourteen of the conspirators, and the avowed object of their conspiracy—to do a deed that should render them illustrious and gratify their superiors. So fair as the paper in question goes to show, this affair may be similar to that of Thomas A'Becket, where the assassins did not wait for the bidding of their sovereign, but desired to anticipate his wishes. It is strongly to be suspected that our presence in Japan has at least the secret opposition of a great conservative party, an opposition that only awaits opportunity to break out into open activity.

The following quotation from the North China Herald is another item of information regarding the late crisis, and consists with the hypothesis just stated:—"Some curious revelations, we understand, have reached our Minister as to the real instigator of the attack on the legation; and most curious of all, while it is traced to one of the great feudatory and semi-independent princes, the provocation seems not to have come from us at all, but from the Russians! A collision, of which many of the details are in circulation among the people, appears to have taken place at the island of Tsassima, in the Straits of Corea, early in June, during which it is said the prince's palace was bombarded, one of his villages and forts taken, and many of his followers killed and wounded. To avenge this outrage and defeat, hearing a great foreign chief was at Nagasaki on his way to Yeddo overland, he instantly despatched one of his emissaries to follow him; and if he could not be slain on the way, to find the fitting instruments among the Loonins—never far to seek in Yeddo—attack the Legation, and bring his head, after massacring everybody in it. This is the popular version, and implicitly believed by many well-informed Japanese. That there was a collision at Tsassima with the Russians is certain. That the Prince was ill-disposed to foreigners before any such provocation, is also known. That he should take this indiscriminate and wholesale way of avenging himself is only too much in keeping with their usual habits of thought and action—too much so at all events to be discarded as improbable."

The news from Peking is a little uncertain. Some accounts report the Emperor to be ill—probably wishing so to explain his long absence from the Capital; other reports say that he intends returning in October. The temperature at Peking has been so high as 106 in the shade; the nights were cool.

From the three Northern Ports there is very little news; at none of them does trade appear to have got into a normal condition. Some of the troops are being withdrawn from Tien-tsin. New-chwang, although by every account, situated in a large producing district, has not yet done much in the way of trade. With regard to Chefoo—or rather Yentae, which is the part occupied as a foreign settlement,—it may be considered one of the most promising ports in China. It possesses an excellent harbour, and the country all round it is of the most beautiful description, only to be surpassed by some of the best Japanese scenery. The climate is pleasant and healthy, and the place altogether has exceeded the highest expectations that were formed regarding it.

The news from the Yang-tsze river is confined to the fact that trade at Hankow is improving. There has been no fresh movement of the rebels during the past fortnight, it is not unlikely that they are gathering themselves up for an effort.

Our Ningpo correspondent states that Pook-fong-yuen, about thirty miles from Showing-foo, has fallen to the rebels. The place has been closely invested by the rebels for some time, and has been nearly taken several times.

TRADE CIRCULARS.

WOOL.

[C. JACOMB AND SON.]

London, 26th August.

THE public sales of colonial wool, which commenced 18th ultimo, will finally close to-morrow, 27th instant.

Exclusive of about 5000 bales held over from May, the quantities arrived in time for sale were:—

20,078	bales	Australian
24,933	,,	Victoria
10,169	,,	Tasmania
7,193	,,	Adelaide
903	,,	Swan River
13,241	,,	New Zealand
8,909	,,	Cape of Good Hope
Total ... 85,426 bales.

Including to-morrow's sale, the quantities catalogued will prove to be about—

20,853	bales Australian	...	51	bales	German
24,094	,, Victoria ...	...	543	,,	Spanish and Portugal
9,484	,, Tasmania	...	176	,,	Buenos Ayres
6,738	,, Adelaide...	...	165	,,	Russian merino
1,095	,, Swan River	...	181	,,	United States
13,013	,, New Zealand	...	199	,,	Sundry
9,563	,, Cape of Good Hope
84,850	bales colonial	...	1315	bales foreign.

It is assumed that about 5000 bales arrived in time have not been offered, and about a similar quantity has been bought in or withdrawn; forming about 10,000 bales held over for November, in addition to late arrivals of about 32,000 bales fresh stock.

At the commencement of the series and for the first ten days the attendance of buyers, home and foreign, was very much smaller than customary for many years past, and owing to the depressed state of trade and unsatisfactory appearance of foreign affairs, a general unwillingness to stock, excepting at a considerable reduction in prices, was apparent. Prices immediately receded from May rates to an average of 1½d to 2d per lb.; the decline being largest on ill-conditioned and faulty wools from the Australian colonies, and least on well-conditioned and stapled flocks thence.

The great fall in value of the English and French clips bore with severe effect on the lower qualities, and it was not until the prospects of a good in-gathering of the harvest were more matured by the favourable change in weather, after the issue of our circular of 26th July, and the reduction in the bank rate of interest to 5 per cent. on 1st August, that a gradual rally in prices occurred on such wools as had been most depressed: with an accession of fresh buyers, home and foreign, a stronger feeling pervaded the market, and the sales are closing with much firmness, but shew a decline from May rates of 1d to 1½d per lb for good and well-conditioned wools, and 2d to 2½d on inferior or badly-conditioned flocks.

Foreign purchases have been larger than was at one time expected, but fall far short of the amount taken for export in May.

Australian Wools of prime and good quality and condition, have been eagerly competed for; but a large proportion of this clip has this year arrived in sadly seedy, burry, and mosty condition, arising probably from late shearing, and has in consequence suffered materially in value.

From Victoria really prime combing flocks have commanded much attention, and with scoured wools have perhaps realised nearer to May rates than other descriptions.

Tasmanian wools generally have been in worse condition than last year, and the general run of prices on this produce, is fully 4d per lb. less than last year for the same flocks.

A large bulk of ill-conditioned wool from New Zealand has been disposed of at prices apparently low, but there is still in many flocks so large an admixture of heavy and greasy fleeces in the bales, that it is next to impossible to form an accurate estimate of value. Well-stapled and clean flocks thence, however, have commanded attention at satisfactory prices to growers, but not equal to the sanguine colonial expectations of those who consider that the English market must always be in the ascendant.

Adelaide and Cape wools in grease have been in good supply, and have suffered in value pro rata with other wools of low class.

There is every probability of November sales totalling 60,000 bales, an unusual quantity for that time of the year, and indicating a large probable increase of imports for next year.

TALLOW AND HIDES.

[GOAD, RIGG, AND CO.]

London, E.C., 7th August.

Australian Hides.—The demand has been limited, and prices have been barely supported. The import since 6th ultimo has been light, and stocks are not heavy. The sales since 6th ultimo comprise 11,592 salted hides. Sydney, 1st heavy, 54½ to 57¼ lb., 4½d to 4¾d; 1st light, 37¾ to 43¾ lb., 3¾d to 3⅞d. Melbourne, 1st heavy, 58½ to 58¾ lb., 4¼d to 4⅞d; 1st light, 42¾ to 45¾ lb., 3¾d to 3⅞d; 2nd class, 3¼d to 3¾d; 3rd ditto and badly damaged, 2d. Kips and skins, 2d to 3½d per lb. Import 23,054 hides; present stock 32,051 hides.

Sheep and Lamb Skins.—The public sales on the 11th ultimo were flat, and only a limited business done in South American: the bulk offered was old stock: prices ranged from ½d to 1d per lb. lower. Lambskins chiefly inferior and sold low. Cape and Australian in fair request; good woolled skins brought full prices, short and inferior leather lower. 31,309 Australian sheep: fine wools, good, 62¾ lbs., 63s 6d; ditto, dirty, 50¾ lbs. to 55 lbs., 25s to 28s 3d; short ditto, 37 lbs. to 37¾ lbs., 10s 6d to 15s 6d; shorn ditto, 27¾ lbs. to 42 lbs., 6s to 15s; dry damaged, 5s to 43s 9d per dozen.

Horse Hair.—The market has been over supplied, and the trade being dull, prices have given way, with only a moderate business done. Tail hair must be quoted 1d to 1½d per lb on the average lower, and sales are difficult. Mixed sorts and short hair sell heavily at barely late rates.

Horns.—Ox and cow continue difficult of sale, and prices are in favour of buyers; trade very depressed. 28,978 Australian: 13¾ to 15¾ oz., 18s 6d to 30s 6d; 10¾ to 12¾ oz., 14s to 19s 6d per 123.

Bones and Bone Ash.—Bones: the latest sales have been at a decline of 5s to 7s 6d per ton. Floating cargoes are in limited request; quotations unaltered. The sales since 6th ultimo comprise 376 tons S. A. bones and hoofs: common, 85s to 92s 6d; hoofs, £7 15s per ton. 65 tons Australian bones: shanks, fair to good, £10 10s to £15; inferior to middling, £5 to £9; common, 80s to 85s; hoofs, £8 5s to £9 5s per ton.

The Tallow Market has been very depressed during the past month, and prices of all descriptions have declined materially. The holders of Russian being extremely anxious to realise their old stock, have forced sales weekly, both by public and private, and have submitted to a continuous reduction in value—the price to-day being for old tallow 45s to 46s, and new Y. C. 47s, which is a decline since the 6th ultimo of 5s to 5s 6d per cwt. For forward delivery rather more business has been doing, the present quotation for delivery the last three months being 47s to 47s 3d, which is also 3s 3d to 3s 6d per cwt. lower. The reduced price of tallow has slightly improved the demand, and rather more business has been done on the spot during the last few days than for some time past, but as long as the desire to realise on the part of the holders of Russian continues, no improvement in value can be looked for unless a large autumn demand, and limited supplies from Russia this season, should reduce our present large stock to a moderate compass. The deliveries during the month have been 7355 casks, against 6722 casks in July, 1860, and the present stock consists of 54,176 casks, against 36,308 casks at the same time last year. The home produce has been in moderate supply, and the present market price is 46s 6d per cwt. nett cash.

Australian Tallow.—The sales of this description during the month consist of 588 casks. The value to-day of good mutton is 47s, and good beef 43s to 44s, and inferior descriptions at proportionate rates, being 4s per cwt. lower than on the 6th ultimo. Import 1162 casks. Present stock 1304 casks.

OILS, WHALEBONE, AND TALLOW MARKETS.

[BEALE, BOWES, GAME, AND CO.]

August 23.

OUR sperm oil market has become very inactive, and but a trifling business has been done the past fortnight at £93 per tun for good quality, at which we have sellers. The very high price of cotton is against any improvement in this article at present.

Whale oil keeps in good steady demand at £35 10s to £36 for first quality, and £34 10s to £35 per tun for second ditto, there being a short supply of seal oil this season, has caused whale oil to be more enquired for.

Whalebone is quiet and rather lower. We quote Polar £370 to £380, Ochotsk £350 to £360, and South Sea £335 to £345 per tun.

Cocoanut oil is scarcely so firm as a few weeks since, Cochin having receded to 44s, and Ceylon to 43s per cwt., Sydney we quote 38s to 42s 6d per cwt. according to quality; these prices are very high as compared with tallow, and unless that article advances, much will depend on a few of the largest holders of cocoanut oil if present quotations are to be maintained.

Tallow has declined in value owing to large quantities of old P. Y. C. being brought to auction, but the low rates have caused the trade to buy largely for consumption, and the market, the last few days, is certainly firmer. To-day it is steady at 46s 6d for new P. Y. C., and 43s 6d to 44s for old. Australian fine mutton 44s to 46s and fine beef 42s to 43s 6d per cwt. Present stock, 50,400 casks, against 38,820 casks this time last year.

WINES AND SPIRITS.

[F. W. COSENS.]

August 19.

The main feature in our wine and spirit market since the departure of the July mail, has been the rise in brandy, caused by the confirmation of the unfavourable advices from Cognac, and which lead to the inference that brandy of the vintage of 1861, will not be quoted by the leading shippers; Martell's 1860, free on board export ship in London, 9s. 10d.

The demand for wines has been scarcely equal to that of the earlier months of the year; at the same time the consumption month by month shews a considerable excess in comparison with any former year. There can be no doubt that the late fiscal regulations have permanently increased the consumption of all descriptions of wine.

WINES.

Sherry.—The increased consumption since the reduction of the duty in England has rendered prices extremely firm at Xerez, and all classes of good sound exportable sherry are higher than ever, and no reduction can reasonably be looked for until a series of abundant vintages free from oidium shall have caused some accumulation, which cannot at present be the case with an actual consumption in England of 40,000 butts annually, against 28,000 formerly; in fact, taking all matters into consideration, prices rule very moderate, especially for the younger vintages.

No clearance for Australia is advised since the Woodlark, which left Cadiz in May last for Sydney.

Port.—This wine has largely benefited by the reduction of the duty, the consumption being for the half-year 5000 pipes in excess of 1860, the figures being 14,000 pipes and 9,000 pipes respectively.

The advices from the Douro continue most unfavourable, the disease having spread to a greater extent than ever. The 1860's promise to be good serviceable wines, but the prices will undoubtedly be affected, if the present vintage prove a short one.

The latest advices from Port Phillip report a revival of demand for fine old Port wine, light in colour; for such of good quality about £90 in Melbourne would scarcely cover cost, charges, and duty; therefore, with a maximum limit of £80, such wine clearly cannot be shipped.

French and German wines remain without material alteration; common growths of hock and claret are in fair demand, while choice growths realise high quotations.

SPIRITS.

Brandy.—The latest advices from Cognac from the most reliable sources assert that the vintage will prove one of the smallest on record for years—that the yield will not exceed one-fourth of an average. Prices at Cognac remain considerably in excess of the rates ruling in London.

		Gallons.
Imported into United Kingdom, January to June, 1861 ...		971,064
Home consumption	713,580
Exportation	313,655	... 1,027,235

Rum.—There have been considerable transactions reported in this spirit; prices, however, remain without material alteration.

BURWOOD.—CRICKET.—A well-attended meeting took place on Saturday last, at Lucas', Golden Age Inn, Parramatta Road, for the purpose of re-establishing the Burwood Cricket Club. The following office-bearers were appointed:—Mr. Henry Moon, president; Mr. George Frederick Poole, secretary; and Mr. William Lucas, treasurer. Members were enrolled, six of whom were appointed to form a committee of management, pro tem. The proceedings passed off spiritedly, and concluded with a vote of thanks to Mr. H. Moon, for his conduct as chairman. A second meeting was held two evenings ago, when a further enrolment of members took place, making the number over twenty whose subscriptions were paid down. It is hoped from this excellent beginning that the Burwood cricket club will be enabled to fully establish itself and prove a complete success. As is announced by advertisement, the club intends to play its opening game to-day.

The amount of gold coin issued by the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint during the week ending to-day, October 11th, has been 33,000 sovereigns.

The quantity of gold-dust imported into the same establishment for the purpose of coinage has been 15,086 ounces.

The Western, Southern, and Northern Escorts have arrived during the week from our several gold-fields, and have delivered at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint the following quantities of gold-dust: Western: From Sofala, 823 ozs. 14 dwts. 18 grs.; Bathurst, 720 ozs. 18 dwts. 11 grs.; Windeyer and Hargraves, 285 ozs. 3 dwts. Total, 9764 ozs. 14 dwts. 18 grs.

The Jason arrived to-day from London with a cargo of general merchandise.

The share market has been rather quiet during the week, and the amount of business transacted has been limited. This inactivity has been caused, not from any decrease in the amount of capital offering for investment in bank, steam, and insurance shares, but from the paucity of stock now in the market for sale. The approaching half-yearly meetings of some of the companies has also caused holders to ask higher rates, as the dividends about to be declared are expected to be satisfactory. Bank shares are firm at quotations; steam shares continue in demand, and holders are now asking higher prices; marine assurance shares are firm, and the shares of the New South Wales Marine Assurance Company have been sold at an advance of 2s. 6d. per share. Sydney Insurance shares are in demand and have an upward tendency. In coal shares there has been very little doing, but as a speedy settlement to the strike is now expected holders are not desirous of forcing sales. The following are the prices at which sales have been made during the week:—Commercial Bank, £45 per share; Bank of New South Wales, £35 per share; Australian Joint Stock Bank, £11 per share; Australasian Steam Navigation Company, £26 per share; Hunter River New Steam Navigation Company, £16 per share; Illawarra Steam Navigation Company, £4 7s. 6d. and £4 10s. per share; Sydney Insurance Company, £2 15s. per share; New South Wales Marine Assurance Company, £3 5s. per share; Wallsend Coal Company, £11 15s. per share.

DEBENTURES.—Government debentures are steady. Terminables, due in 1891, have changed hands at par, and interest.

The following table will show the closing prices of our securities, as well as the rates at which business has been done during the week:—

Capital.	Companies.	Paid up per share.	Closing Prices.	Business done.

Business continues dull, and the sales by auction during the week have generally been unimportant. The news by Benares has not yet had time to affect our markets, but probably next week, when the advices are digested, some fluctuations may take place.

FLOUR.—The depression noticed in this market still continues, and sales are with difficulty effected. Fine flour is quoted at from £13 10s. to £14 per ton. A small quantity of Californian flour, ex Druid, was placed at auction on Thursday, at £14 per ton. Wheat is also dull of sale. Adelaide is quoted at 6s. per bushel.

LIQUIDS.—Brandy is steady; Martell's is quoted at 11s. 3d. to 11s. 6d., and sales have been made at 11s. 4½d. Rum is firm, and 30 o.p. ranges from 4s. 1d. to 4s. 3d. Geneva is a little more in demand, and prices are again a shade higher. First brands of low strengths and small quantities are quoted at from 13s. 6d. to 14s. 3d. In wines there have been some transactions; good sherries and ports are scarce, and command full prices. Low wines are more in demand, and have brought slightly improved rates. Beer in bulk is much firmer, and first brands filled up command £8 per hogshead. Porter in bulk is dull of sale; Taylor's £5 15s. to £6. Bottled ale and porter, first brands, are in moderate demand, at from 9s. 6d. to 10s. 6d.

TEAS.—Good congous are scarce, and saleable at full rates. Common teas, of which stocks are heavy, are dull of sale. Green teas are very scarce, and sales have been made at £6 10s. to £7 per chest; boxes congous, 21s. to 26s.

SUGARS are dull of sale, and the price nominal, owing to the large quantities that have lately arrived.

COFFEE is very dull of sale, and has fallen about ½d. per lb. Manila is quoted at 7d. to 7½d. per lb. in bond; Java, 7d. per lb. in bond; plantation, 10d. per lb. in bond.

CANDLES continue to be dull of sale, and prices are nominal. Belmonts, 14d. to 14½d. Nevas, 1s. 3d.

RICE is in fair demand, and Patna is worth from £17 10s. to £18 per ton.

SALT is a little firmer; Liverpool, £5 to £5 5s. per ton; fine salt, £4 10s. per ton; rock salt, £6 per ton.

OILMEN'S STORES.—Almost all articles under this heading, with the exception of oils, are dull of sale. For pickles there is some inquiry at lower rates.

On Wednesday Messrs. L. E. Threlkeld and Co. held a general sale of assorted timber, at the Liverpool-street Saw Mills, when fair market prices were on the whole realised. The following are the principal quotations:—

Colonial T. and G beech boards, 23s; colonial hardwood, 1¼ inch, 22s 6d; T. and G. pitch pine, 20s; slating battens, 22s 3d.

On Thursday at a general sale of groceries, Californian flour, ex Druid, was placed at £14 per ton; and a few parcels of Mauritius sugar, ex Wild Wave, at an advance of 30s. on last quotations. To-day the same firm sold, on the Market Wharf, a quantity of colonial produce, when Brown's River potatoes fetched £6 15s. per ton; oaten hay, £6 10s. per ton; and Hobart Town shingles, 14s.; cedar, 14s. to 15s.

Messrs. Durham and Irwin held their usual weekly produce sale this day:

Wool.—The catalogue comprised a few odd bales, which were placed thus; scoured at 24½d, locks at 10d, mixed at from 6½d to 8½d per lb. Sheepskins continue about the same as last week; about 3000 were sold at from 7d to 8½d per lb. Tallow.—The market is, if anything, easier; 42 casks, principally station parcels, were sold at £33 to £36; ships at £15 per ton; suet at 3d per lb. Hides.—Heavy well-cured are in better demand and a slight advance has taken place; one prime lot of 87 realised the extreme price of 16s each; about 700 were disposed of thus: prime heavy at from 14s to 16s; other lots 4s 9d to 12s 6d. Calfskins, 1s 4d to 2s 9d each. Shankbones, £8 per ton. Hair, 4d per lb.

By the Benares we have our file of papers from England to the 26th of August. The chief items of commercial news have, as usual, been anticipated by our telegrams, but we now give full particulars.

The improvement that has taken place in the English funds has caused also an advance of one per cent. in the price of our Government debentures; the latest quotation for those due in 1866 being 99 to 100, and for those due in 1871 and upwards, 98½ to 99½, and business done at 99¼. The Times of the 26th August, says—

Consols opened this morning at 91⅞, to 92, and almost immediately improved to 92⅛, but subsequently experienced a partial reaction, the last official prices being 92 to ⅛ for money and 92⅛ to ¼ for the account. After regular hours there was another relapse of an eighth. India Five per Cent. left off, the old at 102⅞ to ⅞, and the Scrip, 103⅛ to ⅛, the latter having at one period marked 103⅜. Rupee paper advanced to 95⅞ and 102⅞, being in demand with a limited supply. Exchequer-bills are also higher from the increasing ease in the money-market. Reduced and New Three per Cents. left off at 92 to ⅛; Bank Stock, 233 to 235; India Stock, 218 to 220; India Bonds, par; and Exchequer-bills, March, 8s, to 3s. discount; June, 1s. to 4s. premium.

In the discount market to-day the demand has not exceeded the average on a Saturday. On the Stock-Exchange money is freely offered at 2½ to 3 per cent.

Foreign stocks have been inactive, but generally steady.

The closing price from Paris this evening was 68 francs 60 cents, showing an improvement of an eighth.

About £40,000 in gold was purchased by the Bank to-day.

The precise amount of specie that will be taken by the steamer with the outgoing Bombay mail on Tuesday is £50,013, of which £1500 is in gold for Alexandria, and £10,113 in gold and 38,400 in silver for Bombay.

The suspension of Mr. Alexander Gordon, civil engineer and contractor, of Westminster, has taken place. The liabilities are believed to be considerable, but the assets are also large.

The following are the latest quotations of Australian Securities on the London Stock Exchange:—English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered Bank, 16¼ to 16¾ ex. div.; London Chartered Bank of Australia, 23¼ to 23¾; Bank of New South Wales, 34 to 36; Oriental Bank, 50 to 51; Union Bank, 39 to 40.

The subjoined remarks respecting the money market and city intelligence is from the Home News of the 26th August:—

Since our report of the 25th July the money market has continued very easy, and the rates of discount have steadily and rapidly declined. When we last wrote, the bank rate was 6 per cent. It has been reduced successively 1 per cent. and ½ per cent., now standing at 4½ per cent., with every prospect of a further reduction to 4 per cent. The chief cause of this material change is, we think, due to the general stagnation of trade, which has reduced the bills in circulation to an unusually small amount. The prospect of a fair harvest has no doubt had considerable influence on the policy of the bank directors, but the real source of the downward movements is the restricted character of business during the past six months. Since the reduction of the bank rate to 4½ per cent., the discount market has been decidedly quiet, and the supply of bills is still limited. At the bank yesterday, the applications, though moderate, were rather more numerous, but in Lombard-street transactions took place as low as 4 and 4¼ per cent. on good foreign bills.

In consequence of the alteration at the bank, the joint stock banks have reduced the rate allowed for deposits to 3½ per cent., except that the London and Westminster allow only 2½ for sums below £500. The discount establishments will henceforward give 3½ per cent. at call, and 3¾ at notice.

It is only this week that the Share Markets have responded to the favourable influence of declining money and splendid harvest weather. The warlike character of the American news for some time prevented any improvement. There has now, however, been a good business done on the Stock Exchange at an advance on Consols of about 1 per cent., and on colonial securities of 2 to 3 per cent. Closing prices will be found in our Latest City Intelligence.

Harvest is now general throughout England, and during the past fortnight a considerable breadth of wheat has been carried to the barns and stackyards, for the most part in good condition. In some, we may say many, instances there is so much grass amongst the wheat, arising from the foulness of the land and a thin plant, that another week in the field will be necessary to enable the farmers to stack their wheat in even fair order. The crop is generally very thin, but the grain is good and well ripened. In some of the few cases in which new wheat has been thrashed we hear that the yield has not come up to the growers' anticipations, founded on the appearance of the uncut crops, though the condition and quality have been very good. This usually happens with a thin crop, a large yield being seldom obtained unless there is a full plant of straw. Taking the actual state and system of cultivation throughout the country, we expect to find the present wheat crops producing a low acreable yield. Oats, on the other hand, are coming down fuller and heavier than they were expected to do, although their appearance has all along justified high estimates. Barley will be a heavy crop this year.

Our root crops have gone on improving, and the prospects for winter provender from this source are seasonably good.

The exports of home produce and manufactures for the month of June were again upon a much larger scale than could have been expected, reaching £10,362,893, which is more by 12 per cent. than in the same month of last year, though less by 3 per cent. than in June, 1859. For the first six months of the present year the total has been £60,143,425, being only 3 per cent. less than last year, and 4 per cent. less than in 1859. The export trade with the United States is shown to be now completely paralysed; but the falling off in that direction is fully compensated by an increase in other quarters. The imports of breadstuffs for the month were not so large as of late. Those of cotton are likewise falling off. Hence, partly, no doubt, the recent recovery in the American exchange.

The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Australasia took place on the 19th August. The directors' report, which was adopted, refers to the improvement in commercial affairs in Australia, and expresses a belief that the transactions of the current year will be satisfactory. A dividend and bonus for the half-year, together at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum, free of income-tax, were declared. No accounts were submitted at the present meeting, being brought forward only once a year.

The advices from New York mention the failure of Messrs. Claflin, Millen, and Co., reputed to be the largest jobbing-house in that city, with liabilities estimated to exceed £600,000. The assets are stated at two-thirds that amount.

The respectable American agency house, Messrs. Whittemore and Co., of Liverpool, has stopped payment. The amount of the liabilities is stated at above £100,000.

We append Messrs. Goad, Rigg, and Co.'s Circular, received via Marseilles, and dated London, 24th August:—

A considerable improvement has taken place in the demand for tallow since our report of the 7th instant, and a fair extent of business has been done both on the spot and for forward delivery, but as the holders of Russian are still forcing sales of their old stock, we have to notice a further decline in the value of all descriptions, the present price of old Y.C. being 43s to 44s, and new Y.C. 46s 6d, which is 2s on the former, and 6d per cwt. on the latter, lower than on that date. The slight panic in the market occasioned by the breaking up of the Russian speculation has now subsided, and confidence is again established, so that a good legitimate demand may be anticipated for all kinds of tallow during the autumn months, especially as prices are now moderate.

The deliveries since the 1st instant have been large, viz. 10,800 casks, against 6616 casks in the same time last year; the present stock consists of about 50,300 casks against 38,856 casks at the corresponding period last year.

Australian tallow has been in fair request, the sales consisting of 609 casks. The present value of good mutton is 46s, and good beef tallow 43s 6d, and inferior sorts at proportionate rates, being 1s on the former, and 6d per cwt. on the latter, lower than on the 7th instant.

Hides have been in somewhat improved request, and sales have been made at ½d per lb. advance. The arrivals have been light, and stock offering small. The sales since 7th instant consist of 15,869 hides, and the present values are 4½d to 5d per lb. for good heavy Sydneys, and 4½d to 4¾d for Melbournes; light weights, 3¾d to 4¼d per lb. Present stock, 17,500 hides.

Mimosa bark in limited request, and cannot be quoted over £7 to £7 10s per ton for ground; chopped, £6 to £6 10s; and long bark, £5 to £5 10s per ton.

Our dates from New York are to the 14th of August. The New York Shipping and Commercial List says:—

The great event of the times in financial circles has been the advent of the Secretary of the Treasury, in Wall-street, who came from Washington expressly for the purpose of holding a consultation with bankers and capitalists in regard to the new United States loan, authorised by Congress at its late extraordinary session. Two or three meetings have been already held, without, however, arriving at any fixed conclusion; and the final meeting was adjourned over until to-day, when a general meeting will take place of the leading bankers of New York, Boston, and Philadelphia. The bankers and capitalists, without exception, so far as we can learn, manifest a perfect willingness to support the government to the full extent of their ability, though many of them are not altogether satisfied with the manner in which the loan will have to be negociated. It is the general opinion that Mr. Chase has not been invested with sufficient discretionary power, and the provision made by Congress for the redemption of the Treasury notes, which are to be issued and thrown on the market, is regarded rather unfavourably and as not being at all calculated to tempt capitalists to subscribe very liberally. Nevertheless the bankers and moneyed men generally appear to be animated with but one idea, and that is to furnish the Government with means, and to do everything in their power to support the nation's credit. The meetings which have already been held here and elsewhere, have demonstrated this fact in a most striking light, and have also proved that the leading bankers and capitalists are even more unanimous than has been generally supposed. Some dissatisfaction is caused by the clause in the Loan Bill, which prohibits the secretary from accepting bids below par for the 7 per cent. notes, and it is argued by some that, had Congress left it optional with Mr. Chase to negotiate the loans according to his own judgment, he would have experienced no difficulty in obtaining any amount for which he might ask.

The weekly statement of the banks shows a large increase in the specie. The reserve is now upwards of 48,600,000 dollars, and the usual California remittance of 941,081 dollars, will increase it to nearly, if not quite, the unprecedented amount of 50,000,000 dollars. The movement still presents the same features—a rapid accumulation of specie, and a steady contraction of loans. The decrease on loans is 1,735,169 dollars, and the increase in specie 2,403,935 dollars.

Business has been light, and operations have been considerably interfered with by the weather. Some of the leading articles affected by the treaty, or the supply of which is limited by the blockade, continue in active demand at rapidly enhancing prices.

In the money market there is nothing new. Loans on call, stock securities, 4 to 5 per cent. per annum; ditto on bond and mortgage, 6 to 7; prime endorsed bills, 60 to 90 days, 6 to 7; ditto, four to six months, 9 to 10; first-class single signatures, 7.

We have papers from China to the 28th August. The following is the latest report of the state of the Tea Market at Shanghae, Foochow, and Canton:

Shanghae.—Tea, black.—Arrivals continued from Hankow, the quantity variously estimated from 9,000 to 11,500 chests, the latter figure probably nearest the mark. Of these about 2500 chests had been shipped direct for England, and 7000 chests been placed on the market, leaving a very fair profit on prices paid at Hankow. Fair Oonams, and second-class Oopacks, were quoted at Tls. 28½ to 31. One superior chop was reported settled at Tls. 34½. These rates shewed a slight improvement on those current last mail. Stocks were estimated as follows: 1200 chests Hoochows, 1500 chests Old Common Congou, 3000 chests Oopacks and Oonams, and 900 chests Flowery Pekoes.

Green.—In consequence of the Native Customs people still interfering with the export from Ningpo, the stock at that place had accumulated to 12,000 chests, one half of which were Pingsueys, and the other Tychows, &c. The settlements for the fortnight comprised about 9000 half-chests, 1000 packages of which were Japan. The stock in Shanghae amounted to about 9560 packages of all kinds.

Foochow Tea.—The market had not displayed so much activity as noticed in our last; but, notwithstanding this, prices of congou were fully maintained, and there was a disposition on the part of the teamen to demand a higher rate for any choice parcels. For souchong the market was weak, and holders displayed some anxiety to realise on easier terms.

In Oolongs the business had been limited. Since the departure of last mail, the following arrivals had occurred:—

Congou	27,000 chests
Oolong	13,500 half-chests
Scented teas	8,000 boxes
Souchong	1,000 chests
Flowery pekoe	1,000 chests.

The settlements during the same period were as follows:—

Congou, 14,200 chests—
Very low ord. dusty to com.	Tls. 7.7	to 15.7
Good common to flavoury kinds	17.4	23.7
Good flavoury to Kaisow	25.7	27.7
Fine to finest kinds, market bare.
Souchong, 1900 chests	20.7	26.2
Flowery pekoe, 700 chests	30.2	48.7
Oolong, 1700 half-chests	19.7	26.7
Scented teas, 3600 boxes	22.7	29.7

The stocks stood as follows:—89,100 chests congou, 78,400 packages oolong.

Canton Tea.—At date of our last the stock of congou amounted to 36 chops. Since then very little, if indeed any, fresh arrivals have taken place. The settlements during the interval have been 16 chops Oonam at 24½ taels to 28 taels, and 6 chops Oopack at 29 taels to 34 taels, leaving 14 chops in stock. There are not any transactions to report in souchong, oolong, flowery pekoe, or pekoe capers, of which sorts the stock continues very light.

In country greens, the sales do not amount to more than 400 half-chests of all kinds, at following rates:—Gunpowder, &c., taels 35 to 41; hyson, taels 38 to 40; and young hyson, taels 26 to 36.

Canton packet teas continue in fair demand. 500 half-chests congou have passed at taels 25; 8500 boxes scented orange pekoe taels 22 to 31; 6500 boxes scented capers, taels 16½ to 28; 500 packages gunpowder, 15 taels; 250 half-chests oolong taels 16; and 250 chests hysonskin at taels 15.

STOCK AND SHARE LISTS.

[BARTON AND SON.]

THE transactions in the share market are limited only by the scarcity of stock offered. There is a good demand for bank, steam, and insurance shares of almost every description at last prices, and in several instances an advance has been or may be realised. The difference between the masters and coal miners at at Newcastle is, it is believed, on the point of terminating; holders of coal shares are, therefore, no longer disposed to relax from our quotations.

Our sales this week comprise—
New South Wales Bank shares, at £35.
Australasian Steam ditto, at £26
Hunter River ditto, at £16
Illawarra ditto ditto, at £4 7s 6d and £4 10s
N. S. W. Marine Assurance ditto, at £3 5s
Debentures—N. S. W. Government—pay in 1891, at par, and the interest accrued.

Loans upon the security of shares, &c., are negotiated at from 7 to 10 per cent. per annum.

[LENNON AND CAPE.]

Capital is freely offering for investment, but in consequence of the limited supply of stock business has been quiet during the past week. Bank shares are enquired for at last prices, steam shares are sought after, and the shares of most of our other dividend paying companies are in good demand. Coal shares continue somewhat depressed.

Commercial Bank, £45.
Australian Joint Stock Bank, £11.
Australasian Steam Navigation Company, £26.
Illawarra Steam Navigation Company, £4 10s.

[J. MULLENS.]

The aspect of the share market remains much as it was last week. Bank shares are quiet, but steam shares continue very saleable. New South Wales Marine shares are saleable at £3 5s, and Sydney Insurance shares at £2 15s, in anticipation of favourable reports at their half-yearly meetings. Wallsend shares exhibit a decline on last week's prices.

My sales during the week have been—
Australian Joint Stock Bank shares, at £11.
New Hunter River Steam Company shares, at £16.
Illawarra Steam Company shares, at £4 7s 6d.
Sydney Insurance Company shares, at £2 15s.
Newcastle Wallsend Coal Company shares, at £11 15s.
New South Wales Government Debentures, payable 1891, at par and interest.
October 11.

STOCK AND STATION CIRCULARS.

[MR. BREWSTER.]

STATION.—There are many enquiries for good station properties in favourite districts, and I have several large transactions in negotiation.

Store Cattle.—There is no improvement in the demand for this class of stock, and sales difficult to effect even at present quotations. Holders are asking 25s to 27s 6d, for equal sexes—one to seven years old; all females, 27s 6d to 30s; bullocks, 2 to 7, 40s, for delivery on the station.

Store Sheep.—Several enquiries for this description of stock, particularly sound breeding ewes and mixed lots; very few, however, of any sort in the market at present.

[MR. THOMAS DAWSON.]

Fat Cattle.—No change worthy of notice. Present supply fully keeps pace with demand. I quote prime lots £4 to £5; second quality, £2 10s to £3 10s per head.

Fat Sheep.—The market has shown a downward tendency during the week, but is now firm at 17s to 19s for prime flocks, unshorn, and 13s to 15s shorn.

Store Cattle and Sheep.—Nothing doing in either description of stock.

Horses.—Stanch draught and carriage pairs, and first-class hacks only are saleable. A good lot of draught colts now coming to market would well repay the trouble.

Produce at Railway Terminus.—Fat lambs, 21s to 22s each; pigs, dressed, 5d to 6d per lb.; bacon, 5d to 7d per lb.; butter in roll, 8d to 1s per lb., in keg 4d to 8d per lb.; eggs, 1s to 1s 2½d per dozen; fowls, 3s to 3s 3d per pair; ducks, 4s 6d per pair; geese, 8s to 9s per pair; turkeys, 12s to 16s per pair; fat calves, 16s to 44s each; roasters, 3s 6d to 6s 6d each.

Meat Sales at the Lime-street Wharf.—I have sold, during the week, the usual quantity of beef, mutton, and pork at the following rates, viz.:—Beef, 1d to 2½d per lb.; mutton, 2½d to 3d per lb.; pork, 5½d to 6d. per lb.

October 11th.

PRODUCE CIRCULAR.

[MORT AND CO.]

WOOL.—The quantity offered to-day was too small to be taken as a test of the market, nor shall we be able to say how prices will rule until the arrival of some considerable portion of the new clip which may now be shortly looked for. Of six lots offered, two were withdrawn, the rest are under.

Sheepskins.—Last week prices were fully maintained, with, if anything, a slight advance. Two large lots brought 8½d. per lb.

Tallow.—All offered to-day found buyers, except two parcels, withdrawn for a higher figure. Prices ranged from 33s. 3d. to 37s. 6d. for beef, and 30s. to 41s. for mutton. One shipping parcel of 20 casks, middling quality, brought 36s.

Hides.—About 1400 were offered, the whole of which passed the hammer at a decided advance, for good and heavy, on the prices that have been ruling for some weeks past. One lot of New Zealand, heavy, realised 15s, 6d., and several other lots 13s. to 14s. 9d. For inferior and middling, quotations remain the same.

FREIGHTS TO LONDON:—
Wool, ⅝d per lb.
Hides, 25s to 30s per ton.
Tallow, 55s to 60s per ton.
Oil, per tun, as per agreement.

LABOUR MARKET.

BUSINESS in the labour market during the past week has been very brisk. The demand for agricultural and general farm servants has been much greater then the supply. The New Zealand gold-fields has influenced the labouring population, and objections are made for long engagements. A great scarcity of good female domestic servants is perceptible, more particularly general servants; a supply of emigrants would be a great boon just now. Engagements have been effected at the undermentioned rates, viz.,—Married couples, £50 to £65; farming men, £35 to £40; ploughmen, £35; shepherding families, £45 to £55; stockmen, £45 to £50; gardeners, £50 to £60; bushmen, £45; carpenters and blacksmiths, £66 to £85; female domestics, £23 to £36.

HORSE MARKET.

MESSRS. Burt and Co. report a much larger supply of horses during the past week, principally country lots, all of which have been cleared without much difficulty, superior harness horses, as usual, realising good prices. A batch from the Coriangatta stud averaged £12 per head; 10 from Gresford on the Paterson went from £0 to £18; 2 lots of 6 and 8 from Kiama, went from £15 to £26 for the hackneys; and £28 to £31 for the draught horses. A lot of colts from Tyralga, near Goulburn, sold in the Camperdown yard on Tuesday, averaged £9. Useful horses at all times readily saleable at market rates.

Mr. Charles Martyn reports: a brisk and ready sale has been found for all kinds of stock this week, especially for mares for exportation to the New Zealand market. The numerous sales effected have considerably cleared the market of the old stock, and it is now in an excellent state for the reception and disposal of fresh stock, more particularly if of a strong class. The demand for powerful colts is good, as none is in the market; they require to be young and sound, and in good condition, when they will readily realise high figures. The stock, imported ex La Hogue, was submitted to auction on Tuesday last, but were withdrawn for private sale, in consequence of no sufficient offer being forthcoming. The bull calf fetched forty guineas; the colonial thorough bred colt "King John" sold for 100 guineas; and imported cow fifty guineas.

Gilbert and Co. report an unusual briskness in the market. A draft of horses (some of which were partially broken in) from John Mc Lean Esq., realised very fair prices, varying from £3 15s to £21 10s; and, though not up to mediocrity in quality, the average price was £11 per head. We wish our constituents to to adhere rigidly to our advice (which is always reliable) relative to the increasing demand for the Sydney market: send stock in possessing muscular power and condition; other horses of inferior stamp are not only worthless, but prejudicial to the general sale sale of a better class of stock.

Pitt-street. 11th October.

Mr. S. Wooller reports a brisk demand for useful horses throughout the week. Anything ready for immediate work has been sold without difficulty; the competition among buyers generally was spirited, and fair prices were given. The demand for strong hackneys, and all kinds of strong harness horses is good, and the prices may be quoted as last week.

THE TRIAL OF THE BURRANGONG RIOTERS.

THE following letters were read by Mr. Buchanan in the Assembly yesterday:—

Sydney, 10th October, 1861.

Dear Sir,—I beg to call your attention to the debate reported in the papers of this morning, elicited on my motion for enquiry into the conduct of Mr. Justice Wise at the trials of the Burrangong rioters.

You will observe I charge the Judge with partiality and one-sidedness in his whole bearing and conduct on these trials—particularly exemplified in his statements to the jury that it was a misfortune that the police did not take good aim and fire into the people; in his praise of the police, and failure to say one word to any of the Crown witnesses, although guilty of stating palpable falsehoods—particularly the Chinese interpreter Henly.

Everything I said was denied by members of the House, on no other grounds than that they merely did not believe what I said. I would be obliged to you, Sir, to read the debate and give me your candid opinion thereon. It is a very serious question, and no man in this country would feel more deeply than I if I had even exaggerated the charges I brought against the Judge. But I am convinced every word I said was true, as can be sworn to by dozens of witnesses if the House had given me the opportunity of leading evidence. I trust you will give me your fair candid opinion fearlessly. I also trust all the country are not like some of the members of the Assembly, afraid to do their duty. It is a matter of the utmost moment to the best interests of this country to be satisfied whether I spoke truth or falsehood on the occasion referred to. You can satisfy the public on this head if any man can.

I am, dear Sir, yours very truly,

DAVID BUCHANAN.

W. P. Moffat, Esq.

Leave this letter and I will read it and your reply to the House to-day.

To this Mr. Moffat had made the following answer:—

370, George-street, 11th October, 1861.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of yours of yesterday, calling my attention to the reports in the Herald and Empire papers of the debate in the Assembly upon Mr. Justice Wise's conduct during the trial of the so-called Burrangong rioters at Goulburn last month, and asking me to read the reports of said debate and to give my candid opinion thereon.

I regret very much under the circumstances, that you should have thus called upon me, because it is generally known that I was attorney for the so-called rioters, and having personally superintended their defence, I must have been present of necessity during the whole of the trials, and that, therefore, I must have heard and seen all that passed. I regret that I should have been thus called upon for my candid opinion, because I cannot give it either way without giving offence to somebody. However, I consider it most consistent with my position as an independent citizen, to speak the truth, regardless of all consequences.

I have not only read the reports of the said debate, but have looked over my own and other written memoranda of what took place, and I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that your account of what took place, is substantially, if not literally correct as to the facts, except as regards what the Judge said to the Jury, and that was to stick or adhere to their first conviction or impression on leaving the jury-box, whether that conviction or impression was "guilty or not guilty." As regards Owen's trial on Monday, I was not present, and know nothing.

I do not intend by this to convey any opinion of mine, but simply to state what was said and done at the trial, and in doing so I feel that I run the same risk that you run and encountered, viz., of having my statements disbelieved; but as I am not in any way accountable for what other people believe or disbelieve, I rest satisfied, so long as I know that no one can prove what I say to be untrue.

I am, dear Sir, yours, truly,

W. P. MOFFAT.

David Buchanan, Esq., M.L.A.

RIFLE MATCH: ROBERTS v. REYNOLDS.—The remainder of the money in this match (£30) was deposited in the hands of the stakeholder last evening. The shooting will commence at three o'clock (weather permitting), at the St. Leonard's Butts—5 shots each at the respective distances of 700, 800, and 900 yards. Apropos of this, we are given to understand that Mr. Reynolds has offered to shoot against Mr. Brownlow on any day before or after the present match; but that as yet Mr. Brownlow has not accepted.

SHIP SOVEREIGN OF THE SEAS.—As the person signing himself "W. S. Lockhart" seems to labour under the impression that I neither wrote nor understood when written the few lines I inserted in last week's HERALD, to stop him, if possible, from riding roughshod over everybody, myself in particular, I now insert a few more, merely to remove that idea from his mind, as it seems to annoy him even more than the facts I then stated, or the reference made to his praiseworthy conduct on that occasion. At the same time, I must again inform him very plainly that he did not employ me at that ship, and it is a piece of very great assurance on his part in advertising his name to couple it with mine, as my employer. If he wishes to make himself known, do it straightforwardly, not at the expense of another. As Captain Cruikshank is still in Sydney, W. S. Lockhart can easily contradict this assertion if incorrect. Nor did I and his diver stop up all the holes, &c.; but W. S. Lockhart, after his diver had stopped up one hole, told that man that he would not allow him to use his apparatus any more at that ship; that he must use some other if he wished to continue at it, leaving me to stop the remainder—some six or seven more. Still, he talks of when the holes, &c., were stopped, so and so was done with the greatest coolness imaginable, and any person not immediately acquainted with it would suppose he had done everything himself, although he had about as much to do with the ship when the holes were stopped as Port Royal Tom.

As to Mr. Mitchell coinciding with all he states in his letter, I have no hesitation in saying that that statement is incorrect, for the very reason that it was impossible for that gentleman to do anything of the kind; and I have no doubt he would ere this have contradicted it, had he thought such worth his notice. As to Mitchell and Co. being my employers, and therefore must know all I do, &c., I may as well now state, that the only connection between that firm and me is in their having a diving apparatus, which they allow me to use at discretion, making my own arrangements; not as W. S. Lockhart imagines, that I cannot even put an advertisement in the newspaper but they must previously know it. But to the purpose. It is, to say the least of it, certainly amusing to those who know him to find Mr. W. S. L., a CI DEVANT limeburner, passing himself off as a professor of ship-raising; and if I have, as he says I have, been inadvertently guilty of impudence in addressing him before, I trust he will forgive me when he reflects on the stock of that article he himself must be possessed of, to place himself so prominently before the public in that capacity; also as Afforder-general of valuable information to British insurance companies. It is an old saying and a true one that people who live in glass-houses ought not to throw stones, and were W. S. Lockhart to commence nearer home, and afford to some of our Sydney merchants some valuable information in reference to transactions that occurred in connection with some of his ship-raising—British Merchant to wit—it strikes me pretty forcibly he would have his hands quite full enough without interfering with other people's affairs.

I now trust Mr. W. S. L. is satisfied as to my competence to answer his effusions without referring to principals at all in the matter.

THOMAS D. MACNAB, diver.

THE OLD HOUSE IN PARK-STREET.—
The Fashions.
We deem we're a bit of a judge
Of poetry, pathos, and passion;
Nor will we a stanza begrudge
To the goddess of goddesses—Fashion.

From Eve, who made aprons of leaves
(Nor of Adam asked did she require them),
To the belles whose chaste skirt and bell-sleeves
Make the "lords of creation" admire them,—
No cupids that fly in the air,
Or naiads that float in the waters,
With Fashion can ever compare
To make pretty wives of fair daughters.

Since Fashion we all must admire,
Then note the last lines of our sonnet.
Go to Giles for what else you require,
And to Webb's for "a duck of a bonnet."

But, as you would avoid the shades of woe,
Avoid the red man-milliner just below.

Chinese Sheep.

BURT and CO. are instructed to sell by auction, at their Bazaar, on WEDNESDAY, the 23rd instant, at 11 o'clock,
2 Chinese sheep (ram and ewe), both young, and recently imported.
☞ Persons conversant with the management of these sheep believe them to be the most profitable animal (to the flockowner) yet introduced to Australia. Their habits of endurance to hardship and wonderful fecundity guarantee the purchaser a large flock in a short period.

Pure Negretti Merino Rams.
Just landed, ex Helene, from Hamburgh.

BURT and CO. are instructed by the importer, R. Kummerer, Esq., to sell by auction, at their Bazaar, on WEDNESDAY, the 23rd instant, at 12 o'clock,
5 pure Negretti merino rams, just landed from the Helene.
These rams are fully equal, if not superior, to any yet imported; they were bred in one of the choicest flocks in all Germany, at Rittergut, Neidergandern, near Goettingen, and the average clip of the sheep in that establishment at last shearing, including weaners, averaged over 4½ lbs. weight each.
Accompanying these rams is a certificate from E. Kunitz, general inspector of the sheep establishments in Saxony, Prussia, Silesia, &c., certifying that these particular rams are from the original Negretti stud at Neidergandern, and of pure blood and original descent.
☞ Now on view.

The Industrial Exhibition of 1862.
To Scientific Contributors of Works of Art.
Model of the Great Eastern steam-ship.

GILBERT and CO. have received instructions to dispose of by public auction, at their Newmarket Horse Repository, opposite the School of Arts, on MONDAY next, the 14th instant, at half-past 2 o'clock.
The above interesting, elaborate, and instructive work of art.
This exquisite specimen of highly-wrought skill and most minute mechanical combination, is the workmanship of Mr. Allom, the managing overseer of one of the leading Horse Bazaars of this city; and though this lilliputian representative of the monarch of the main has been turned out of hand by a mere tyro and amateur in modelling, the many gentlemen who have inspected its faithful details affirm that it will bear favourable comparison with any similar artistic production of the mother-country, and that the design, as well as its execution, speaks with a perhaps dumb yet impressive emphasis as to the high conceptions and concentrative capacity of its originator.
The model will remain on view at Tattersall's Hotel till the day of sale.

SATURDAY'S Clearing out Sale.

CITY OF NEWCASTLE.

Extensive Sale of Valuable Freeholds, as follows:—
THREE-STORY DWELLING-HOUSES, situate in KING-STREET
TWO-STORY DWELLING-HOUSES, situate in BLANE-STREET
25 BUILDING ALLOTMENTS.
Title unquestionable.
Terms at Sale.

MORT and CO. have received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 16th October,
The following very valuable freeholds in some of the leading thoroughfares in the
CITY OF NEWCASTLE.
LOT 1.—4 THREE-STORY DWELLING-HOUSES, built of brick on substantial stone foundation, slated roofs, and well finished throughout. Each house contains front verandah, 2 balconies, and 8 rooms. They form one handsome terrace, fronting KING-STREET, with French lights opening upon the balconies, and occupy a block of land having 57 feet frontage by a depth of 73 feet. Each house has a good back yard, with reserved back entrance.
 This fine range of houses is near the BANK of AUSTRALASIA, and within a short distance of the MARKET WHARF, and all the principal thoroughfares of the city.
LOT 2.—4 TWO-STORY DWELLING-HOUSES, on substantial stone foundations, iron roofs, and well finished. Each house contains front verandah, 2 balconies; and 6 rooms, enclosed yards, with good water. They form a capital block, fronting BLANE-STREET, a continuation of Hunter-street, the best business street in the city. They are opposite to the Railway Station, and would prove a most PAYING INVESTMENT.
LOT 3.—25 BUILDING ALLOTMENTS, with frontage to Blane-street, Church-street, and reserved streets.
These allotments are in excellent positions, and the fullest information may be obtained at the Rooms.
☞ Considering the DAILY INCREASING IMPORTANCE of this flourishing city, its advantageous position in a commercial point of view, its BEAUTIFUL HARBOUR, and the extent and richness of the MINERAL RESOURCES of the surrounding districts, there cannot be a doubt that it presents a WIDE FIELD for PROFITABLE SPECULATION to capitalists.
In proof of this, it is only necessary to point to the vast increase to the shipping trade of the port as compared to a very few years back, the continuation of which may fairly be looked for from the fact of NEWCASTLE being THE GREAT TERMINUS and SHIPPING PORT for the several lines of rail, which must ultimately traverse the districts to the north and west, including THE GREAT NORTH TRUNK LINE.
As a FAVOURITE WATERING PLACE Newcastle is already a place of considerable resort, and therefore property well situated, as is the above, and now in the market for BONA FIDE sale, cannot fail to prove to any purchaser a PERMANENT, SAFE, and REMUNERATIVE INVESTMENT.

Preliminary Notice.

Those truly magnificent cattle stations on the Lachlan River, in the Lower Darling district, known as BALLANGERAMBLE and WOGONGA, having twenty miles frontage to the Lachlan, with unlimited back run; together with 12,000 head of very choice cattle.

ELLERSLIE HOUSE AND GROUNDS, SALISBURY ROAD, WAVERLEY.

Title.—Unquestionable. For full particulars apply to S. C. BROWN, Esq., Solicitor, Pitt-street.
Terms.—Half the purchase money may (at the option of the purchaser) remain secured by mortgage on the property.

MORT and CO. have received instructions from JOHN BIRRELL, Esq., in consequence of his departure for Europe, to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on WEDNESDAY, 13th November,
That very valuable property and choice family residence ELLERSLIE HOUSE and GROUNDS.
This very beautiful freehold is situated on the heights of Waverley, and is surrounded by the estate of the Messrs. VICKERY, the AUDITOR-GENERAL, and those of W. SPAIN, Esq., J. J. FALCONER, Esq., and others.
The HOUSE is a handsome stone building, with slated roof, constructed throughout of the most massive masonry, and finished in the very best style, with all the modern improvements as regards light, ventilation, &c.
On the GROUND FLOOR, which is reached by a flight of stone steps, there is a spacious verandah on three sides, entrance hall, handsome drawing and dining rooms, fitted with marble mantelpieces and rich cornices, library, and breakfast room, and back verandah and storeroom.
The FIRST FLOOR, approached by a handsome staircase, contains spacious landing and four bedrooms, with a magnificent balcony on three sides.
On the BASEMENT is extensive cellarage, part of which is fitted up as a dairy, the whole perfectly dry and ventilated. The rooms on the ground floor are 12 feet high, and the upstair rooms are all 11 feet high, and there is a fireplace in every room in the house, and all handsomely papered, &c.
At the rear is a paved court-yard, on one side of which is a range of stone buildings with slated roof, consisting of large kitchen and laundry, with two servants' sleeping apartments over.
There is also a range of stabling, comprising two stalls and large coach-house, with hay-loft, and groom's-room over.
The roof-water is collected in large tanks, which are further supplied from a never-failing well in the garden by means of a force-pump, thus affording the greatest abundance in all seasons.
THE GROUNDS have a frontage of 357 feet to Salisbury Road, and are laid out as a shrubbery, vegetable garden, and orchard, &c.
 The whole property is enclosed with substantial paling fence, is throughout in the very best order, and will bear the closest inspection.
☞ Mort and Co. feel that they can with the greatest confidence recommend this choice property to the notice of the public, and more particularly to those who may be on the lookout for a beautiful suburban residence.
☞ The buildings are first-class, having been erected entirely with a view to the occupation of the vendor himself, and certainly not with any expectation of their being brought into the market. In point of situation, nothing even on the shores of Port Jackson can exceed it. The view on every side is limited by the horizon alone. To the east the vast waters of the ocean, with the various pretty headlands along the coast; to the south the suburbs of Waverley and Coogee, with the lands of Botany, bounded by the waters of Botany and Cook's River, and the country beyond, extending to the Blue Mountains; to the west, in a continuous line, the whole of Newtown, Canterbury, and Camperdown, extending round and including the whole of the city and the intervening suburbs of Paddington and Darling Point in one vast panorama. In fact, it is quite impossible to do justice in a mere advertisement to the extent, variety, and beauty of the scenery on every side. The strongest assurances can also be given as to the construction of the house, and the condition of the premises throughout.
 Intending purchasers are most earnestly invited to inspect the property prior to the sale. It may be viewed every day after 11 o'clock, by cards obtainable at the Rooms of Mort and Co.

Potts' Point, Darlinghurst.

One of those delightfully situated Family Residences on the Eastern side of Potts' Point, with deep water frontage to the Harbour, and comprising about Half an Acre of Land, most tastefully laid out.
Preliminary Notice.

T. W. BOWDEN has been favoured with instructions to sell by auction, at the Land Sale Rooms, 423, George-street, on THURSDAY, the 7th day of November next, at 11 o'clock,
That substantial stone-built family house, beautifully situated on the eastern slope of Potts' Point, extending from the main road to the waters of the harbour, commanding uninterrupted views of some of the most charming scenery, and now occupied by Mrs. J. R. Wilshire.
The house contains a good entrance-hall, large drawing and dining-rooms, parlour, and library on the ground floor. The drawing-room and library open into one by folding doors. On the first floor are two large bedrooms, and dressing-room in front; and two good sized bedrooms behind, the windows of which overlook part of Hyde Park and that portion of the city.
All the windows in the eastern front have the great expanse of water in view, extending from Woolloomooloo Bay to the Lighthouse, and the numerous headlands, points, islands, and beautiful residences, forming together some of the most charming scenery imaginable. At the rear of the House is a kitchen, scullery, servants' rooms, laundry, coachhouse, and stable, all of stone. Some minor buildings of wood. In the basement story are four square, good-sized, dry, and well-lighted rooms, or cellars, partly cut out of the solid rock. Water laid on, drainage well provided for. The whole of the front to the harbour is terraced, and planted with shrubs, trees, and flowers. A snug boat harbour and bathing-house are at the extreme boundary of the land, but quite unseen from the house and lawn.
This property would command a very high rental, but it is one of that stylish character that should never pass out of the hands of the proprietor, and therefore it has been determined to dispose of it by public competition.

CANNINGTON VILLA and GROUNDS,

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions from Arthur Todd Holroyd, Esq. (in consequence of his removal to Sherwood), to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, on MONDAY, 4th November, at 11 o'clock,

CANNINGTON ESTATE,
NEWTOWN,

Comprising about six acres and a-half of land, beautifully situated on the Erskinville Road, opposite the grounds attached to Pine Villa, the valuable property of F. Wilson, Esq., and adjoining the residence and grounds of George Rowley, Esq.

Cannington Villa contains four large rooms, kitchen, servants' rooms, and numerous out-offices; and on the estate there are also several cottage residences, which could be sub-let by the purchaser or used in connection with the property. The garden and orchard are extensive and tastefully laid out. The residue of the land is subdivided into cultivation and grass paddocks, all of rich alluvial soil, for which this part of Newtown is famous.

It will be sold as a whole, or in lots to suit purchasers, and in either case the sale presents a most favourable opportunity for investment. It is surrounded by first-class properties, commands pleasing and extensive views, and is within a very short distance by a good road from the heart of the city.

The prospective value of the property to a speculator is large, as it offers unusual advantages for subdivision, and a market would be readily found for sites so close to the city boundary in a noted and remarkably healthy locality; or, if kept in its entirety, Cannington forms a truly choice suburban residence and estate, with gardens, orchard, and a large area of good well watered land for grazing or cultivation paddocks.

It need only be further remarked that the whole is for positive sale, in consequence of the proprietor changing his residence, and the special attention of the numerous enquirers for this description of property is directed to the opportunity now afforded for securing a residence and grounds highly improved close to the city, and enjoying, at the same time, all the advantages of a country estate.

The situation could not be better, as it commands the southern markets as well as those of Sydney and the Western Goldfields.

The runs are well watered and of a fattening nature, with valuable improvements, and equally adapted for sheep as cattle. The stock are as well bred as any in the district.

The above valuable pastoral property.

BLOCK No. 16, DUCK CREEK, contains an area of about 16,000 acres, and is admitted to be one of the best grassed and watered blocks of country on the Bogan. In addition to its extensive frontage to the Bogan of nearly ten miles, the back part of the run is well supplied by the noted Duck Creek, and it is again intersected by the waters of the Gunningba Creek, affording a considerable supply. The grasses and herbage of the run are of the well-known character for fattening stock, for which the best parts of the Bogan are famous.

The improvements are substantial, and comprise overseer's cottage, huts, &c., with a large newly-erected stockyard.

With the above station will be sold a capital herd of 1000 HEAD of CATTLE, more or less, of the DD brand consisting of bullocks and spayed cattle.

☞ The character of the above run is too well known in the Wellington district for its very rich pastures, and their quickly fattening qualities for stock, that comment on it, or its DD herd of cattle, is scarcely necessary. It now offers to those interested a capital opportunity for investment, as it has the advantage of being but lightly stocked, whilst its carrying capabilities are estimated at very large numbers.

☞ This well-known property has enjoyed a popularity as a business house for so many years that it is scarcely necessary to do more than announce the sale to attract the attention of capitalists to the splendid opportunity for securing one of the best investments offered in the colonial market. From the extent and position of the property in the town, also the connection attached to it, no one can fail to transact a first-class business at the "Northumberland;" and if conducted with ordinary care and attention by one thoroughly acquainted with the trade, a certain fortune may with certainty be secured in a few years.

200 HEAD of HORSE STOCK, more or less,
all bred from choice mares of good quality, picked for the purpose.

. Both cattle and horse stock will be mustered and delivered.

☞ Particular attention is directed to the above sale, as affording one of the best opportunities which has occurred for acquiring an extensive and valuable run in the famed district of New England, with only a very limited number of profitable stock on it; its close proximity to an important gold-field, it being scarcely 25 miles from the productive Hanging Rock mines—with their ready and incessant markets for its produce, points it out as the most desirable and profitable small compact station property which has been offered in the market for bona fide sale for some time.

The greater portion is cleared and enclosed with a wire fencing, and the land is reputed to be the best in the flat leading from the town of Brighton to the flat at the lagoon, being mostly rich black swamp land with a fine elevated site, commanding a view of the ocean, &c., for a residence.

☞ It is scarcely necessary to make a single comment respecting this valuable piece of land, and parties seeking a first-rate site in this favourite health-restoring locality are invited to inspect prior to day of sale, on which date it will be positively sold.

The magnificent estate, well known as the YELLOW ROCK FARM, comprising 1760 acres (more or less), with advantage of an extensive Government back run, only available to the above estate, and situate about fifteen miles from Singleton, nine miles from the intended railway station, New Freugh, and about thirty miles from Maitland—on the direct overland route to Sydney with fat stock, and as a depot for such purpose stands unrivalled in the northern district.

R. G. YEOMANS has received instructions from Messrs. Allan, Street, and Norton, agents for the proprietor (Mr. Walker), to sell by auction, at the Northumberland Hotel, West Maitland, on THURSDAY, October 24th, at 12 o'clock,

The above truly magnificent and valuable estate, well known as "The Yellow Rock Farm," comprising 1760 acres, more or less, with an extensive back run of Government land, only available to this property, and admirably suited for grazing or dairying purposes; situated as above described, on the direct line of road overland to Sydney by the Bulga, and bounded by the Wollombi Brook, possessing a never-failing supply of water, and abounding in a superabundance of grass and herbs of the most fattening nature, in all seasons.

The improvements consist of a comfortable cottage, four rooms, with outbuildings, stockyards, &c., and a large portion of the estate subdivided into CULTIVATION AND GRAZING PADDOCKS.

The cultivation land now under crop is proverbial for yielding the finest wheat grown in the district, both as regards quantity and quality, which at all times realise the highest market prices.

There is a large tract of splendid cultivation land on the estate, which might at a trifling expense be placed under crop, or tenanted out into convenient farms, which would readily let, and return a first-rate interest for invested capital.

The Auctioneer, inviting especial attention to the sale of this beautiful property, would remind farmers, squatters, capitalists, and stock-buyers desirous of either forming a comfortable homestead near Maitland, or securing a depot unsurpassed in this district as a resting-place for fat stock, intended either for Sydney or Maitland markets, to pay a visit of inspection to this property prior to day of sale, feeling confident that an estimate of its true value, either to subdivide into farms, or as a homestead, can only be made by thoroughly inspecting the estate.

To the capitalist desirous of investing surplus funds, the above affords an admirable opportunity of securing a first-rate sale per centage for capital without risk.

This dray has the advantage of containing three tons of coal easily, and only requiring half the amount of labour to drive that is required for two ordinary teams fetching the same quantity of coals, the owners having had thirty-six tons of coal drawn by the team (with sometimes 5 horses working it) per week, and 1 man only employed; and this at the present price of eight shillings per ton, that is being paid for coal drawing to Morpeth, would make it a desirable investment for coal owners or carters. 4½ tons of flour have been also loaded on this dray, and taken to Maitland. Carriers or mill-owners requiring a first-class team should not neglect this opportunity.

The attention of the public is particularly requested to the above important sale. MR. WILLIAM TINDALL has received instructions from T. H. Sindon, Esq., to sell, at Mr. John Fullagar's Yards, on MONDAY next, 14th October, at 12 o'clock,

First-class Cattle Station, known as
"YARROW CREEK," BEARDIE PLAINS,
In the New England District,
With 6000 Head of Cattle (more or less).

DODDS and CO. have received instructions to sell by auction, at the Northumberland Hotel, West Maitland, at 12 o'clock on TUESDAY, the 5th of November,

The first-class PASTORAL PROPERTY known as "Yarrow Creek," on Beardie Plains, universally known as one of the best cattle stations in New England.

Yarrow Creek runs through the entire property, its course being marked by large flats of the richest description of pasturage, which in the driest season is capable of affording abundant sustenance, the most fattening, to at least double the number of cattle now advertised to be sold, having ample scope for the accommodation of at least 12,000 head of cattle at all times.

The improvements include a comfortable DWELLING-HOUSE of eight rooms, large store, with detached kitchen, and other conveniences.

A capital BARN and three-stall STABLE, newly erected.

A STOCKYARD, sufficient for 4000 head of cattle; milking-yards, &c., &c.

Three grass paddocks and three cultivation paddocks, an excellent garden, &c.

With the above station will be sold
6000 HEAD OF WELL-BRED CATTLE,
the management and breeding of which has engaged the most careful attention of the present proprietor for more than the past twenty years—large sums having been expended in the purchase of imported bulls.

Stores, stock horses, dray, team, crops, implements, &c., to be taken at a valuation.

This important pastoral property is one which the auctioneers have much pleasure in recommending in the strongest manner to their friends and the public. Everything is in complete order—an excellent residence—and everything requisite for profitably carrying on the important business matters of the establishment.

Parties having any wish to know more of the above valuable property are strongly urged to take an early inspection, when they are assured they cannot fail to be well satisfied with their visit.

Terms—Twenty-five per cent. cash; balance by bills at six, twelve, and eighteen months from day of sale, with interest added, and secured on the station.

IMPORTANT TO SHEEP BREEDERS.
SALE OF MERINO SHEEP.

To be sold by public auction, on THURSDAY, the 31st October next, and the following days, in a field near the New Club-house, Christchurch, Canterbury,

The whole of the Mount Eden and Christchurch valuable Ram Breeding Flocks of George Rich, Esq., Mount Eden, Auckland, who is about to decline business in the southern hemisphere and return to England. Also,

The newly imported pure Spanish and French Merino flocks, chosen by Mr. Rich in Europe, with great care, and landed here a few months since.

The imported sheep will be sold singly, unless otherwise agreed upon at the time of sale; some of these will be sold each day.

The Mount Eden and Christchurch Shakspere Merino flocks will be sold in lots of five ewes to suit purchasers, and to enable each sheep holder to become his own ram breeder.

The following is a list of the lots which will be offered for competition:—
235 two and four tooth rams, one hundred are two tooth, and by imported Spanish rams, out of the Mount Eden ewes
505 Shakspere Merino ewes, from two tooth upwards, 100 of which are by imported Spanish rams
400 ram and ewe lambs, more or less by imported pure Spanish and Shakspere rams, out of the above ewes
65 imported Spanish ewes, fifteen have a dash of French blood; about forty of them will lamb in December next, by the prize ram
15 imported Spanish and French Merino rams, one of which gained a first-class prize in Germany, two years following

The weights of the fleeces from these imported sheep clipped in England, clean river washed, as follows:—
French Merino ewes averaged 10 lbs. each
Spanish ditto varied from 7 lbs. to 11 lbs. of wool, eleven months and a half growth
Imported Spanish rams, sires of the above mentioned yearlings and lambs, clipped last season, over 15 lbs. each in the grease.

The Auckland Mount Eden Shakspere Merino flock has been removed to Canterbury, partly owing to the disturbed state of the Northern Island; and Mr. Rich has since decided to dispose of the whole of his Mount Eden and other sheep, and return to England.

The ewes have been selected for ram breeding, and their wool has been most favourably reported on by Mr. Hughes, the eminent wool broker of London.

The imported Spanish Merino flock is of ancient and pure blood, the fleece being remarkably fine, very closely set, and of great weight.

None of the ewes of this flock have ever been disposed of since their importation from Spain.

At the same time will be sold Mr. Rich's mare "Matilda."

The imported sheep follow the call of the shepherd.

The whole of the sheep will be sold with the wool on.

If there is a good attendance and fair competition at the sale, it is Mr. Rich's intention to dispose of the entire flock, without reserve.

Terms will be given at time of sale.

For further particulars, apply to GEORGE RICH, Christchurch; or, MILES and CO., Lyttelton and Christchurch.

N.B.—Steamers will sail from Canterbury for Australia and the neighbouring Provinces in New Zealand, a few days after the auction.
